The President's Plan
Deadlock in Italy
Getting and Keeping
The No-Stop Diesel Engine

By Arthur Brisbane

THE PRESIDENT said a few words, at the end of last week, and immediately, in all of the stock exchanges and business circles of the world, was born a feeling of hope and encouragement.

The President's suggestion comes to this: "Let all the nations stop hounding each other for money, at this peak of world depression. Let payment of debts among nations, principal and interest, be suspended for one year, including reparations imposed upon Germany."

Uncle Sam makes the proposition with good grace, since EVERYBODY OWES HIM AND HE OWES NOBODY.

The French government probably will agree to the arrangement, with reluctance, if at all, for France must give up more than she will save. However, if all other nations agree, France, for the sake of the general world effect, will probably agree also.

President Hoover's plan was greeted with cheers in the Commons, when MacDonald accepted the President's suggestion. That naturally would happen, for the British now pay out more than they take in.

Germany is delighted, and while stock prices went up two to twelve points in New York, following a substantial rise on Saturday, increases in Germany were much greater. The mark went to par, stock in the Reichsbank went skyrocketing. Cotton rose $3 a bale, wheat two cents a bushel. It was a happy day in many places. Let us hope the happiness will continue.

While the world is grateful to President Hoover for having said the thing that has lighted the world gloom, at least temporarily, it is understood by business men that the President possesses knowledge concerning conditions in Europe that made urgent action necessary.

The Vatican and Mussolini's government have reached a deadlock. The discussion turns on the questions as to who shall control the education of youth in Italy. The Pope, who speaks of youth as "the most exquisite part of the church," declares that in striking at youth, Mussolini has struck at "the heart of the Pope." There seems at present little hope of an amicable standing.

Mussolini speaks of the Vatican government as an entirely foreign nation, complaining that meetings of "Catholic Action" on Vatican soil can be compared with his Fascisti holding their official meetings in the city of Washington, D. C.

Mr. Mason, an editor, wants the best story about "How I Got My Job," only graduates of 1931 classes to answer.

Getting a job is only moderately important. KEEPING A JOB, and achieving success where you start, is the big thing.

When James Simpson was young, he decided to work for Marshall Field, because Field was the greatest merchant in the world. He worked for Marshall Field, and is now head of Marshall Field & Co., and owns it.

John S. Burke, out of Yale, walking along Fifth ave. in New York, liked the looks of the new Altman Building, and said to himself, "I think I'd like a job there." He got it, STUCK TO IT. Now, since the death of Col. Friedsam, he is head of Altman & Co.

These are exceptions, but success usually consists in STICKING. If you can't succeed in one place, you probably will not succeed in another.

From time to time in this column, you have read about the Diesel engine, predictions that it will solve the flying machine problem, reducing costs, ending fire, and predictions that the Diesel engine will make the isolated farmer independent of the power company.

Did you notice the Diesel engine in the annual Roamile automobile race at Indianapolis? One car, not especially built for racing, had a Diesel engine and it was the only car that went through the race without stopping, or taking on fuel.

It averaged nearly 90 miles an hour, and the total cost for fuel, most important of all, was one dollar and seventy-five cents for 500 miles.

The driver could just as well have carried four passengers, and if he had been going to California, the trip for each would have amounted to less than two dollars. That is something for railroads to think about.

And why don't they, by the way, build light trains, or individual cars, driven by Diesel engines, and thus forestall airplane competition for years to come and make full use of their marvelous rights of way?

Cabinet Seeks Substitute for Hoover Proposal; Mussolini Raises Customs Issue

TODAY'S DEVELOPMENTS ON HOOVER DEBT PLAN

MARKETS—Stock and commodity prices again rise in world's markets, but on more conservative scale. New York stock prices mixed.

LONDON—England credits Mellon with debt plan as formal acceptance is cabled to Hoover.

PARIS—Cabinet considers and rejects two compromise plans; will meet again tomorrow.

GERMANY—Berlin hopeful, but awaits crucial decision by France. Plans made to appease Mussolini on customs.

TOKIO—Cabinet favorable to Hoover plan.

WASHINGTON—Need for speedy acceptance again urged, while France's decision is anxiously awaited.

ITALY—Mussolini to reply tomorrow and will raise customs union issue.

Paris, June 23 (AP)—Information in diplomatic circles indicates France is now working on a definite counter-project to the Hoover war debt proposal, which will be submitted to the Cabinet tomorrow.

His counter plan it was said today is based upon Mr. Hoover's principle of helping Germany, but it also takes into consideration France's desire to keep on with the Young plan and to assist Germany by payments through the bank for International settlements.

The cabinet today discussed two possible answers to Hoover's proposal, and both of them were turned down.

One of the suggested replies was formulated by the Foreign Office and the other by Finance Minister Flandin.

STARR'S LOVE DIARY IS GUARDED

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Mineola, L. I., June 23—The passionate love diary of beautiful Starr Faithfull was placed under guard of two armed policemen today to await its reading to the Nassau County grand jury which went into session to solve the mystery of her death on a Long Island shore.

Other developments today were:

1—Accompanied by a detachment, 14 witnesses appeared at the courthouse here to give testimony laying bare the double life of the Greenwich Village party girl.

2—Dr. G. Jameson Carr, ship's surgeon and "star witness," went before the jury "to tell all" after asking a judge to define how much he could say without violating professional ethics.

3—Samuel Untermyer, noted New York attorney, appears with Dr. Carr to advise and direct him.

4—Providence, R. I., youth, son of a wealthy stock broker, may be named as a figure in the mystery, according to officials.

5—Entries in Starr's love diary, made public today, reveal her passionate affection for a man hitherto unconnected with the case.

TWO-GUN DIARY

It was because of disclosure of love passages from Starr's diary today that the guard was placed over the book.

Inspector Harold R. King, one of the leaders of the investigation, saying he did not know who made the excerpts public, added:

"But it's a two-gun diary, now. It's going to be presented to the grand jury and in the meantime we've placed it in custody of two armed detectives."

Dr. Carr, whose arrival with Atty.

Mail Truck Stolen and Then Recovered

A mail truck, filled with valuable registered mail, was stolen from in front of the New England building, 200 Summer st., today, as thousands of office-goers streamed from the South station and hurried to work, and was out of circulation for an hour and a half before being recovered.

The stolen truck, with its cargo still intact and apparently untampered with, was found abandoned at Old Colony boulevard and E st., South Boston, by a policeman. It was turned back to post-office authorities.

STOCKS HIT BY PROFIT-TAKING

New York, June 23 (AP)—Prices closed $1 to $3 lower on the New York Stock Exchange today, reflecting extensive profit taking from the sweeping rise of Monday and Saturday.

Compared with yesterday's violent advance, the leading security markets of the world were quiet. London showed slight advances, while Berlin Boerse was relatively steady and the Paris exchange somewhat irregular.

Trading here was largely influenced by realising sales on the part of traders who wanted to take quick profits on the recent advances. The decline was broken by a few rallies, one led by the copper issues and another by the oils, but in general prices were drifting lower most of the day.

The turnover of shares in the New York market was only 2,600,000, or 3,000,000 shares less than yesterday's.

'YOU CHOKED HER!' CRIES STATE TO PLAYBOY

Text of Hathaway's Testimony on Page 5

By WIN BROOKS
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent.

Newport, R. I., June 23—"I did not."

Characterized as a sheik who thought every girl he saw wanted to meet him, Elliott R. Hathaway, 28-year-old Fall River playboy, shouted that denial today to the State's charges that he strangled Verna Russell while forcing an unwelcome passion upon her.

Visibly shaken, Hathaway flung his vehement denial in the face of Atty.-Gen. Benjamin M. McLyman near the close of his cross-examination on the 13th day of his trial for the murder of the Fall River nurse.

His sublime complacency wilted, but he did not lose his composure. A few minutes later he stepped down from the witness stand and smiled as he resumed his seat with his counsel.

DENIES HE'S DON JUAN

"You've got quite a reputation around Fall River as a sheik, haven't you?" McLyman shouted as he drew to a close a withering, scornful cross-examination.

Defense counsel immediately objected and were sustained. Judge Charles A. Walsh instructing the jury to disregard the question.

"There's an idea in your mind that every girl you see wants to meet you, isn't there?" McLyman thundered.

The defence objected again and was overruled. Hathaway brushing his hand across his face, answered:

"No, sir."

"As a matter of fact," pursued the prosecutor, "you've got an idea you can go out and get any girl you want?" Hathaway denied it.

"Your whole intention that night in getting the gin and park-

Braves Field, June 23—Ray Moss, former Brooklyn pitcher, made his first local start as a Brave in the second game of the double header with the Cincinnati Reds here this afternoon.

He was sent to the hill to avenge the two to nothing defeat which the Warriors suffered in the opening contest. Red Lucas, a former Tribesman, held the natives to three scattered hits in the opener, so Manager Dan Howley selected Larry Benton, another former Tribal star, to hurl for the Reds in the nightcap.

Lucas was invincible in the first game allowing only one man to advance as far as third base while walking one. Wee Willie Sherdel, who pitched for the Braves, allowed only seven hits, but the Reds bunched two of these in the first for one run and repeated the stunt in the third.

FRENCH CABINET DEBATES DEBT PLAN, UNABLE TO AGREE

WASHINGTON IS DISTURBED BY DELAY

Hoover Acted When German Situation Became Critical; French First Notified

adjourned until tomorrow, at which time Premier Laval hopes to be able to submit a draft which his colleagues will accept.

Although it was impossible at the conclusion of today's Cabinet session to forecast what form the French reply would take, it was known an attempt would be made to settle the question of unconditional reparations in a way satisfactory to the government. Criticism of the Hoover proposal has been largely directed at the fact it would mean loss of reparations tagged "unconditional" and therefore not subject to postponement under the Young plan.

THE BIG "HOWEVER"

One minister declared after the cabinet session that France was ready to aid Germany in order to foster internal solidarity. He said, however, his government certainly would insist on a distinction between conditional and unconditional reparations payments.

It is unlikely that any definite information about the French response will be known officially until after tomorrow's cabinet meeting.

In preparation for that meeting Premier Laval, Foreign Minister Briand, Budget Minister Pietri and Finance Minister Flandin conferred this afternoon.

Meanwhile the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies reflected a somewhat more sympathetic attitude toward the Hoover proposal than was evidenced yesterday.

SOCIALISTS' PLANS

The Socialists of the Chamber decided today to frame a manifesto approving the Hoover plan so far as conditional reparations payments are concerned but making reservations regarding unconditional payments.

Several deputies have filed notices of their intention to question the government about the Hoover plan in the Chamber this week.

In diplomatic circles it was reported that the French government was drafting a counter plan to be considered by the full cabinet tomorrow. This plan it was said would endeavor to meet President Hoover's ideas, namely, that Germany be helped.

Le Journal Des Debats says France, Italy and Belgium exchanged views today on the Hoover plan. The paper declares the political aspect of the proposal was discussed and also that conversations have been held by treasury experts of the three nations.

Washington Disturbed by French Attitude

Washington, June 23 (INS)—France's failure today to take any definite action on President Hoover's proposal for a year's suspension of all war debt payments between governments caused some disappointment in Washington.

There is still a strong feeling of hope here that the force of circumstances and world opinion will yet compel the French to acquiesce in the plan.

The most irritating factor to Washington was not so much that there is to be another 24 hours' delay before anything definite comes from Paris, but that every indication points to France's drafting a counter-proposal, and negotiation is on what the administration has stated will not be undertaken in this case.

It was made known by high authorities at the State Department that France was the first nation notified when President Hoover decided to act.

This information said there had been no preliminary discussion of the plan with any other nation, but that the President had been following the situation in Germany with keen solicitude and acted when the financial crisis indicated that unless he did so at once disaster was imminent. It was added that France was notified last Friday.

Meanwhile President Hoover laid aside all other matters to devote his entire attention to the proposal for a one-year suspension in the payment of international debts. He watched closely the reaction of the world to his suggestion.

One phase of the President's statement had not been exhausted to the satisfaction of all involved. The Belgian cabinet asked what he meant by "the important creditor powers," but White House officials for the time being withheld explanation. Belgium, officials said, apparently is studying the same problem as that puzzling France.

President Hoover is making a complete canvass of all members of the Senate and House to ascertain their attitude toward his proposed war debt reparations holiday.

It was said at the White House today that Mr. Hoover had talked to all members of the House and Senate in Washington and had consulted with many of them by telephone.

Mellon Credited With Plan; London Accepts

London, June 23 (AP)—Formal British acceptance in principle of President Hoover's war debts proposal was cabled Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador at Washington, yesterday and was delivered to the United States government today, the Foreign Office announced.

Prime Minister MacDonald, answering a question in the House of Commons regarding his conversations with Andrew W. Mellon, American Secretary of the Treasury, replied:

"The conversations I had with Mr. Mellon were in no sense official and I have nothing to report."

He also made a similar answer with regard to the visit of Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius of Germany.

Despite the prime minister's formal utterances, authoritative quarters today for the first time asserted that President Hoover's initiative was due largely to conversations Mr. Mellon had with Prime Minister MacDonald, who previously had informed himself of the German situation in his conversations with Bruening and Curtius.

Berlin Eagerly Awaits Decision by France

Berlin, June 23 (AP)—German officialdom declared a one-day moratorium from overwork today, with the realization that Paris—not Berlin or Washington—is the hub of the universe in respect to the Hoover debt proposal.

"The whole world waits for Paris," Mittag Zeitung announced in a banner line, unquestionably voicing the sentiment of all Germany. Ambassador Leopold von Hoesch, who hastened to Paris when President Hoover cut the gordian knot of international debts, has been in continuous touch with Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius, advising them as to what Germany can do to make France's acceptance of the plan easier. Until Paris makes her decision the Wilhelmstrasse is marking time.

MUST CONVINCE ITALY.

Meanwhile, another German ambassador has a formidable task. Carl von Schubert, who hardly had time to unpack his grips in Berlin before he was sent back to Rome, must try to convince Premier Mussolini that the customs treaty with Austria and reparations are not related nor are the customs union and naschluss (political union) identical.

Insofar as German public opinion was concerned, yesterday's burst of jubilation was followed by a day of sober speculation. Newspapers pointed out that the people realized the millennium had not come by any means and more than ever Germany must now show herself worthy of the Hoover confidence by doing everything possible to reduce public expense, eliminate waste and extravagance and little by little get back on her feet by her own efforts.

ECONOMIES PLANNED.

One evidence of this feeling is the Reichsbank's decision to try to get along without the $30,000,000 loan placed at its disposal by American banks.

Despite a one-day moratorium from overwork, the cabinet held a brief meeting today and formally agreed there could be no relaxing at present of the Spartan economy measures. All savings made possible through the Hoover plan, it was decided, must be devoted to putting public finances on a sound basis.

BRUENING HOPEFUL

Chancellor Bruening said in an interview today he would heartily welcome an informal conference with French officials over mutual problems "for we certainly have an earnest desire for friendly conversation with French statesmen."

Concerning French adherence to the Hoover moratorium proposal, he said:

"I have the conviction and hope that France will not let this very great moment slip by for the pacification of the world, of which a rapprochement between France and Germany forms an important, integral part."

Belgium Fears Deficit Under Hoover Proposal

Brussels, Belgium, June 23 (AP)—The Belgian government today awaited word from its ambassador in Washington as to whether President Hoover included Belgium, when he suggested that the important creditor powers suspend war debt payments for one year.

Officials pointed out that the Belgian budget is drawn up on the basis of German reparation payments and that the Young plan was a part of Belgian law. It was said other quarters that approval of the Hoover proposal would increase Belgium's deficit by about $22,000,000.

The newspaper Independance Belge said the plan was a "disastrous arrangement."

Mussolini to Raise Customs Union Issue

Rome, June 23 (AP)—Premier Mussolini will put the finishing touches on Italy's reply to the United States war debt proposal at a conference tomorrow with Finance Minister Mosconi and Foreign Minister Grandi.

The premier already has outlined his policy which will be to require assurance that Germany will refrain from utilising any expected economic recovery to further political designs such as the proposed Austro-German customs union.

Vatican Is Pleased With Hoover's Plan

Vatican City, June 23 (AP)—President Hoover's proposal for a moratorium on war debts has made a good impression at the Vatican. The opinion expressed is that any measure which would ease the situation created by war debts and indemnities would help the prosperity of the world.

Greece in Doubt as to Effect Upon Bulgaria

Athens, June 23 (AP)—The Greek government's attitude toward the Hoover moratorium plan was described today as depending on whether the suspension would affect Bulgarian reparations.

If limited to German reparations, it was said, Greece would approve. If it included Bulgarian reparations Greece would lose $1,070,000, and would, therefore, endeavor to obtain extension of the moratorium to her deficiency in receipts by imposing more taxes.

There will be a large deficit in 1932 regardless of the foreign payments, so the idea is to meet the situation by increased borrowing and to count on a revival of business during the rest of 1931 and in 1932 to increase the taxable income of the country on present rates.

AGED MAN HELD FOR FRAUD IN CITY RELIEF

Charged With Receiving $5 a Week, Although He Had $6400 in Bank

Charge that he was drawing $5 a week from the city, although having $64000 on deposit in three banks, was made in municipal court today when Samuel Lewis, 63, of Harrison ave., South End, was arraigned for alleged larceny.

The arrest of Lewis, arrayed in ragged, greasy clothing and living in a squalid room, came on a warrant secured after complaint had been made to the city law department that Lewis had money contrary to his assertion that he was without means of support and could not find work.

Asst. Corp. Counsel Hale Power investigated the complaint and reported Lewis admitted having $6400 on deposit and that he has four married children.

Capt. Sullivan Gets Stick From Mayor

Mayor Curley today presented the last but one of the Irish blackthorges he purchased in Ireland on his recent trip abroad to Capt. Michael Sullivan of 1582 Dorchester ave., Fields Corner, who attained his 80th birthday today.

The gift announcement came when a delegation of 50 Dorchester residents of the district called on the mayor to urge him to erect a municipal building there. The mayor said he wished Dorchester residents would get together and agree upon a site, and added that the Legislature had authorized erection of two in Dorchester and one in Charlestown.

Honey Fitz Back on Job

"Hello, John F."

Very much improved in health and strength and with a good show of his usual ardor, former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald was welcomed to his customary haunts in the heart of Boston.

He breakfasted with Governor Ely at the Copley-Plaza, walked briskly through newspaper row and thence to his offices in Federal st. where he spent the morning in business matters.

It was the first visit to downtown Boston in more than three months of the man who made "Bigger, Better and Busier" the slogan of Boston and "Sweet Adeline" the symbol of political campaigns. He has been convalescing from illness contracted at the funeral of his sister-in-law.

The former mayor said he will make periodic visits to his business offices for the present. He will take a summer place near Hyannisport for rest and recreation to insure his complete return to health.

WORLD TRADE SOME BETTER

Washington, June 23 (AP)—The Commerce Department, reviewing reports of commercial attaches and trade commissioners throughout the world, said today some revival in export trade had been noted in Japan, Siam and in some other spots.

"Although business in Hawaii in most lines is marking time, there has been some recent improvement in retail trade," one report said.

Another quoted Consul Raymond H. Geist at Berlin as saying there was a considerable decline in the number of bankruptcies in Germany during April.

Drouth-Hit Farmers Are Canners Now

England, Ark., June 23 (AP)—Farmers about England, which was one of the hardest hit communities in Arkansas from last year's drouth, have purchased 25 farm canning outfits and a car load of 40,000 cans into which will go this year's surplus of fruit and vegetable crops.

Huge Coal Mining Concern Unionized

Pittsburgh, June 23 (AP)—Mines of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation, second largest coal producer in the Pittsburgh area, opened today with union miners for the first time since 1927. An agreement for an eight-hour day, wage increase and some degree of union control was reached yesterday. The agreement nominally affects 2400 miners.

100 New Lifeguards

Mayor Curley today announced that he has approved the appointment of 100 men as lifeguards and helpers at municipal beaches and bath houses, to continue until Sept. 15, as a help to relieve the unemployment situation.

CURLEY HAILS HOOVER PLAN AS REMEDY

Other Leaders in Boston Also Look With Favor on Hoover's Project

Approval of President Hoover's proposal for a one-year moratorium on war debt payments by European nations continues to be expressed by men prominent in official life as well as by experts in economics and finance.

Mayor James M. Curley, in commenting on the President's proposal today, said, he believed there was no possibility of collecting the total amounts owed America by European powers, "except by war," and that if suspension for a year would mean peace and promotion of business, "it is well worthwhile."

The statement of the mayor and of others on the proposal follow:

MAYOR JAMES M. CURLEY—I had been critical of President Hoover's utterance that faith is the only thing necessary for salvation. This is contrary to St. James' principle that faith without good works is without avail. St. Andrew (meaning Secretary Mellon) is evidently converted to St. Paul's theory. Among his good works is the recommendation that war debts be suspended for one year. This is perhaps the most hopeful contribution to sanity and security in the world and to prosperity in America. No American visitor to Europe has failed to return without the impression that it is a series of war camps. There is no possibility of the United States collecting the total amounts owed by European powers, except through war. If by suspending the war debts for one year we can restore some semblance of sanity to Europe, and preserve peace and promote business, it is well worth while. Every sane individual recognizes that the only way the total amount of war debts can be collected is by recourse to war, and that abandonment of obligations is far better than the price to be paid in blood and treasure as a consequence of war. I believe this is the first step toward permanent abandonment of the payment of reparations.

CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM P. CONNERY, JR. (D)—I always believed that the suspension of debt payments would have a vital bearing on the world's business depression, and also on the good will so necessary for foreign business relations. The optimism so readily displayed throughout the country, and simultaneous with President Hoover's announcement of the proposed moratorium for a year, certainly places me in further favor of this plan. We know that our national depression is prolonged in no small measure by the black business blanket which covers Europe. It is significant that the United States has realized that without alleviation of the war reparation, even if only for a time, there was little hope of shelling optimism into the foreign nations.

I can see where the moratorium, affecting 14 nations, will not only be a universal boomerang, but will avert the financial crisis which Germany faces, a crisis which has been more serious than we could have believed, this far removed. France, of course, would be pessimistic on the moratorium because she benefits so hugely from German war reparations, but France, I believe, must accept the proposal in face of the optimism with which all other nations view the plan. The favorable reaction on every stock exchange in this country and abroad today indicates that the suspension of debt payments is the best stimulant that depression has received since it struck the world two years ago.

PROF. SIDNEY B. FAY of Harvard—It will enable the world to begin to pick up from an economic depression. It will, I think, increase considerably the movement towards economic revival in the country and will perhaps, help to educate the American people to the advisability of eventually extending the moratorium or looking toward partial reduction of inter-allied debts and reparations.

ARTHUR P. STONE, president, Atlantic National Bank—I think things will go along better here. CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM J. GRANFIELD of Springfield (D).—I am more or less in agreement with it. It seems to me that in view of conditions prevailing in Germany we ought to have it. I believe the nations that are suffering from world-wide depression ought to be given enough time to get around to where they ought to be. In other words, they ought to be treated in a manner to enable them to get on their feet.

GEORGE B. RICH, treasurer and secretary Boston Stock Exchange—I think that one reason for the market's being so strong is due to the fact that in the opinion of many in the street the present critical point was in Central Europe, particularly in Germany, on account of the pass to which that country has come in financial affairs; that anything that promises to give Germany a breathing spell will be helpful, and particularly helpful to the business of this country, because in the opinion of many, one of the drags in our recovery in the last month or two has been the growing critical position of German affairs.

Bridge Experts at War Over Uniform Bid Plan

New York, June 23 (AP)—There's open warfare among experts over a plan for uniformity of bidding in contract bridge. Wilbur Whitehead, Milton C. Work, R. R. Richards, E. V. Shepard and Walter F. Injured Speedboat Girl Sorry She was Reckless Auburn, N. Y., June 23 (INS)—In her first interview since she was injured when thrown from her outboard racer, Loretta Turnbull, California champion, today said she had had a premonition of danger.

Loretta Turnbull

"The sudden thought that something was going to happen came to me just before the start," she said. "If I hadn't become reckless, I would probably have medals instead of flowers today. But we can't win races by being careful."

She will continue racing and hopes to participate in the 1932 intercollegiate regatta, she said.

Hollywood, Cal., June 23 (AP)—What the Smiths are to America, the Andersons are to Sweden, says Greta Garbo, and she ought to know, as she came from there.

A reporter asked her to verify a Copenhagen dispatch which said she would marry a Mr. Anderson, a merchant there.

"It might as well have been that I am going to marry a Mr. Smith right here in Hollywood," said Miss Garbo.

U. S. to Avoid Tax Boost in Accepting Moratorium

Washington, June 23 (INS)—For a time, at least, American taxpayers will have little to worry about if the plan of President Hoover for a year's moratorium on debt payments to the United States and the German reparations is adopted.

Officials said today that government receipts for ordinary purposes will be reduced by about $184,000,000 if the allies suspend their payments to this country. That represents about 1 per cent on normal individual and corporation tax rates, but it is not the plan to meet the own obligations to Bulgaria, amounting to $876,000.

Key of Atlanta never said "prohibition is abominable."

Mayor Porter, of Los Angeles, didn't walk out with his wife at Havre, because he saw men drinking wine to the health of the President of the United States. He left because he thought the party was over.

Nothing has been heard from the mayor who made a speech at the tomb of the French Unknown Soldier. Silence is always observed at that tomb, but perhaps the mayor thought silence had lasted long enough, like Mark Twain. He saw a sacred light that had been burning in a pagan temple for 1000 years. "That's long enough," said Twain, and blew it out.

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS

Aboard the Submarine Nautilus, Queenstown, Ireland, June 23—Towed by the U. S. S. Wyoming, the Nautilus put into Cork Harbor yesterday after a stormy, harrowing 17-day cr[illegible]ing of the Atlantic from Provincetown, Mass.

In Cork harbor the Nautilus and her brave crew of 19 men found haven following what we had predicted would be the most dangerous stage of the projected voyage under the ice to the North Pole.

Yesterday's dispatch told how the battleships Wyoming and Arkansas steamed to our aid when accidents to our starboard engine and port motor had left us wallowing dangerously in heavy seas 1000 miles from the Irish coast.

Rear Admiral C. C. Bloch, aboard the Arkansas, signaled that the Wyoming would take us in tow when the weather permitted. Two hours later, Capt. Dutton of the Wyoming signalled that the towline was ready and ordered us to come up under the starboard quarter.

Sir Hubert Wilkins

Capt. Sloan Danenhower, our skipper, maneuvered the Nautilus with her port engine up to the battleship. Then for greater ease in handling he ordered:

"Stop the engine; stand by with starboard motor!"

AT MERCY OF SEA

The skipper again commanded:

"Give her the starboard motor."

The electrician called back:

"We've got no motors. There's a dead ground somewhere; the circuit breakers won't take the load."

Entirely out of control, the Nautilus now drifted without power, at the mercy of the wind and waves. The battleship, fearing our erratic movements, sheered off. We were in a tight fix.

To throw a line and make it fast to the drifting, powerless ship in that sea was next to impossible. The deck watch donned life belts and jumped through the hatch one at a time to cling to the life lines which ran parallel with the deck. There they hung perilously, watching the movements of the Wyoming.

JINX RIDES IN HER PLANE

Ruth Nichols, society aviatrix, is in a hospital today as result of the second crackup in her proposed flight to Paris. Blinded by the sun, she misjudged landing distance at St. John, N. B. X-ray pictures taken today showed two vertebrae of her spine were cracked but doctors said they would mend rapidly and that the injury was not serious.

AROUND WORLD FLIGHT BEGUN

By The Associated Press.

One Europebound plane sped to Harbor Grace, N. F., today, another poised there for the ocean hop and a third lay wrecked at St. John, N. B.

Harold Gatty of Los Angeles and Wiley Post, Oklahoma, starting the first leg of a round-the-world air voyage, hopped from Roosevelt Field, N. Y., for Harbor Grace at daybreak. They completed the 800-mile flight at 12:30 eastern daylight time.

Injuries suffered when she wrecked her high speed monoplane in landing at St. John, N. B., after a fast flight from New York put Ruth Nichols, Rye, N. Y., society aviatrix in a hospital.

X-ray pictures revealed today that two vertebrae of Miss Nichol's spine were cracked. Her doctor, however, said that while the injury was painful it was in no way serious as the cracked vertebrae were not dislocated and would mend easily and quickly.

They planned to stay just long enough to refuel and then start the perilous hop overseas to London.

At Harbor Grace were two Americans with aspirations to span the ocean—Otto Hillig, Liberty, N. Y., photographer, and Holger Hoiris, who flew there yesterday from St. John, N. B., on the second leg of their flight to Denmark. They awaited word of fair weather today. This afternoon they said they would hop off probably early tomorrow morning.

FOLSOM GUILTY IN GIRL ATTACK

Lawrence, June 23—A Superior Criminal Court jury returned verdicts of guilty against Lloyd L. Folsom of Marblehead, 30, married and the father of two small children, on indictments charging him with assault, assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying a revolver without a permit.

The government alleged that the crimes complained of were committed on the Old Colony rd., Saugus, last Monday afternoon, and Folsom's conviction constitutes a record for speedy disposition of such serious charges in Essex County crime annals.

Mary L. Durgin, the complainant in the case, celebrated her 21st birthday the day that she was allegedly attacked by Folsom and she maintained that Folsom attacked her with a loaded revolver and also a tear gas pen, and tore her clothes from her, as she struggled with him for more than an hour in his roadster automobile.

114 Mafia Terrorists Jailed After Trial

Palermo, Sicily, June 23 (AP)—One hundred and fourteen notorious Mafia terrorists faced sentences totaling 15 centuries, after conviction at a trial lasting almost a year.

The sentences will be imposed by the president of the court tonight. Thirteen of the defendants got life, 16 got sentences of 15 to 25 years, 16 will be imprisoned 10 to 15 years, and 69 will be jailed for a year. Fifty-seven others were acquitted.

EX-BOSS NEAR TO TEARS IN U. S. COURT

Must Serve in Atlanta Federal Prison; He Also Faces Huge Civil Suit

Providence, June 23—James Lavell, former wholesale liquor dealer and political leader, was sentenced today to serve 18 months in Atlanta penitentiary for evasion of $102,000 in federal income taxes.

Lavell, dapper and poised, stood in the courtroom surrounded by friends and heard his sentence from the lips of Judge Ira Lloyd Letts, a lifetime acquaintance.

"I find that the verdict of guilty was amply justified by the evidence," said Judge Letts, while Lavell listened courteously. "Although, in view of the magnitude of the offense, the sentence may seem inadequate, this court has taken into consideration the age of the defendant and the fact that, since his conviction three weeks ago, he has not appealed or tried in any way to hamper the machinery of justice."

THANKFUL TO COURT

"May I say a word, your honor?" Lavell asked.

Then, his eyes brimming with tears—the first sign of emotion he had shown throughout his trial—he said:

"Before I leave, your honor, I should like to thank you for the fairness and honesty you have displayed throughout my trial."

He bowed, and turned to U. S. Deputy Marshal Howard Arnold, another acquaintance of years' standing, he said.

"All ready, Howard."

FACES CIVIL TRIAL

As he left the courtroom his friends, among them the leading business men of Providence, continually interrupted his progress with handshakes.

He was taken to Providence jail to await transportation to Atlanta.

Besides the jail sentence, Judge Letts imposed a fine of $9465, the amount he estimated the trial had cost.

The figure of $102,000 covered Lavell's alleged evasions since 1925. Tax evasions prior to that period, protected from a criminal charge by the statute of limitations, are covered by a civil suit for $1,975,000. He will be brought from the penitentiary in November to face the civil suit.

PETER ARNO MRS. VANDERBILT

MRS. SHELLEY TO SHARE MILLION

Mrs. Carrie Shelley of Commonwealth ave. was informed today by the New York Transfer Tax Department that she would share in the $1,000,000 estate left by her brother, Jesse Winburn, to the extent of $196,238.

Winburn, New York banker, not only bequeathed this as a life estate to his sister, but left $50,000 to the Christian Science Church; $25,000 to the Christian Science Benevolent Association; $99,134 to Phoebe Cohen, and other bequests to several New England beneficiaries.

Mrs. Shelley is the wife of Charles Shelley, Boston advertising man. They formerly lived in Brookline.

Mrs. Shelley was also the sister of Michael Winburn, oil manufacturer, who died leaving her a life interest in one-fourth of the residue of his estate and $25,000.

WIFE ON SPREES FIREMAN SAYS

A male neighbor put Mrs. Lucille Laubenstein, of Telegraph st., South Boston, wife of a Boston fireman, to bed when she was inebriated and once she stabbed her husband with a bread knife, according to testimony today in Suffolk Probate Court.

Fireman Charles Laubenstein of Engine 6 is suing for a separation, charging his wife with insobriety and neglect of their two children, Lucille, 8, and Charles, 5.

Laubenstein testified his wife frequently came home drunk, sometimes at 3 or 4 a. m., and he was forced to ask neighbors to care for the children.

On one occasion, he said, she stabbed him beneath the heart, and he still bears the scar.

Philip Martus, a neighbor, testified he frequently let her into her home between 3 and 5 a. m., and once, because she was disturbing the neighborhood, he went in with her and put her to bed.

"She told me she would like to get away from her husband," said Martus. "She said she had a nice young man named Leon, who would be very good to her. She also said she would like to have a sugar daddy."

3 BANK OF U. S. HEADS JAILED

New York, June 23 (AP)—Bernard K. Marcus, president of the closed Bank of the United States, and Saul Singer, executive vice-president, were sentenced today to three to six years in state's prison on a charge of misapplying the bank's funds.

Herbert Singer, son of Saul, was given an indeterminate sentence.

The three were convicted before Judge Donnellan Saturday of misapplying $2,009,518.45 belonging to the Municipal S&L Deposit Co., a subsidiary of the bank.

Judge Donnellan said he believed, despite testimony of the defendants that they acted in good faith in the transaction which led to the indictment, that there was a "consciousness of wrongdoing."

FLAGS FLY FOR WALES, 37

London, June 23 (AP)—The Prince of Wales, England's royal bachelor, awoke today with the realization that he was 37 years old and that the world had beaten a pathway of congratulations to his door.

Thousands of telegrams and messages of felicitation came to York House, first among them from King George and Queen Mary and other members of his immediate family.

Wales treated the anniversary like an ordinary day. After dealing with a mass of correspondence, he motored to Buckingham Palace where he aided the king at the investiture of members of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, of which he is prior.

Over all the land and to the utmost reaches of the British Empire the day was signalized by the flying of flags from public buildings.

Clinton Officials Scored for Laxity

Officials of the town of Clinton were criticized today in a report made to State Director of Accounts Theodore H. Waddell by Chief Accountant Edward H. Fenton for laxity in the collection of money owed the town. The report was forwarded to the selectmen.

Fenton reported the moth and health departments have uncollected bills of several years' standing.

PROBE $10,000 NEWTON BLAZE

Newton police and the State Marshal's office are investigating a blaze which damaged the three-story wooden mansion of the Nathan Sheinsain estate at 41 Washington street, Newton, and caused an estimated loss of $10,000.

A blaze was discovered early today while the two sons of Sheinsain were away from home. Fire was found in the bath room and in a closet on the second floor. The flames swept through the two upper stories and the roof of the structure. The firemen fought the blaze for nearly four hours.

Bernard Pullman, passing by the house, discovered the fire and reported it to the police.

Anxious Sister Flies to Brother

Making the trip in an hour and 35 minutes, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Pratt of Glen Cove, N. Y., flew here today from the Curtiss-Wright flying field at Jackson Heights, N. Y., to go to the bedside of her brother, who is seriously injured at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, the result of an automobile crash. Samuel D. 'YOU CHOKED VERNA!' CRIES STATE TO WILTED PLAYBOY ing out in Winward lane was filled the idea of wronging the girl, wasn't it?' McLyman went on relentlessly.

"YOU CHOKED HER"

"It was not!" cried Hathaway.

"As a matter of fact, every move you made was toward that point?"

Again a denial. His hand, he protested, rested on Verna's thigh because "it just fell down there."

He stepped down from the witness stand. He put his arms around McLyman, demonstrating that petting party that ended in death.

"My arms was around her like this and my hand was here, like this."

"Yes, and you were forcing your attentions upon her," said the prosecution.

"I was not."

"That girl told you she was a girl of honor, didn't she?"

There had been no conversation about that, Hathaway declared.

"And you persisted?"

"No, sir, I didn't."

"And," shouted the attorney-general, "you grabbed her by the throat and you choked that girl, but you didn't go beyond the point she resisted you?"

Said Hathaway, "I did not."

TWO BROTHERS THERE

Shouted questions and loud answers fell on a breathless silence in the crowded courtroom. Hathaway was not his old calm self but his composure was not wholly gone. Of the two, the attorney-general appeared more excited.

Present in the courtroom today with his father was Charles Russell, 17-year-old brother of the slain girl. It was the first time any member of the Russell family except the father has attended the trial. Charles sat beside Alden Hathaway, twin of the defendant.

Brother of the victim and and brother of the alleged slayer sat side by side. They did not speak. They did not so much as glance at each other.

Hathaway left the witness stand shortly before noon recess and Dr. James Hamilton of Providence, first of the defense medical experts, was called to tell what effect the fragment of tooth found in Verna's throat would have had upon her breathing.

The playboy today laid upon his one-time closest friend, Vernon V. Galvin—"I always called him Chick"—the blame for leaving Verna's body out in the lane and the blame for his own flight from Fall River after they had visited the death scene together.

BITTERLY SCORNED

"You thought she might be alive? You thought she might have passed out and still lived? You didn't go to any house near-by? You passed the homes of seven doctors? You spent an hour in Galvin's house, talking and drinking gin while the body of that girl lay out there on the cold ground in Winward lane?" shouted the prosecutor.

Said Hathaway jamely: "I did all I could for the girl."

McLyman pounded at Hathaway relentlessly. He said Hathaway wanted the jury to believe that when he read in the papers he was sought for Verna's death that he had come right back to surrender. But why had he shaved his moustache off? Why had he hidden his fur coat? Why did he registar in New York under an assumed name? Was Galvin responsible for these things?

Said Hathaway: "I went away because of that man sitting right there. He told me to get out of town."

SHE NEVER COUGHED

McLyman persisted in finding out whether Verna Russell had a coughing spell before she died. Hathaway said she did not, that she was choking and gagging but that there was no coughing.

The defendant testified with his hands behind his back or in his trousers pockets expect when he made gestures. Often he gesticulated with the right hand that the state claims throttled his pretty blonde girl friend. He holds it in a peculiar position, with the thumb turned down in the palm. It was so he held it when he was sworn yesterday.

Hathaway's statement of yesterday that he bought ginger ale for his own gin, but that Verna took her's straight was under fire.

"You took your's straight at Galvin's house?" shot McLyman.

Hathaway said, "yes, but there wasn't any ginger ale there."

McLyman thrust one of the ginger ale bottles previously introduced in evidence in front of the defendant and wanted to know if that was the bottle Verna dropped as she died, according to Hathaway's story. Hathaway said he didn't know.

"Miss Russell didn't want ginger ale. That was purchased for you?" the attorney-general continued, and Hathaway again testified that was so.

Yet he had handed her the bottle, he persisted, and had heard the bottle drop as she started to choke and gurgle.

HER HEAD HEAVY

Four or five times he referred to his task of getting Miss Russell fro mthe car into the lane as "a tedious job."

He said that when they moved from the front to the back seat at his suggestion he sat on her left side as they had been sitting in front and when McLyman demanded to know how he had been able to put his right hand at Verna's throat and mouth in that position, to hold her head up as he claims, he said that when she toppled forward he half lifted her and got on her other side.

"Oh, now you've shifted places," said McLyman. "And now it's very convenient for your right hand to go to her neck?"

Said the playboy: "She fell forward."

He showed his right hand at his own chest and at his own throat.

"When your hands were up there you weren't pressing, were you?" asked the prosecutor.

Hathaway: "Couldn't say about that, because her head was heavy."

"In order to hold her head up you put your hand at her throat? You didn't hold her at the forehead?"

"That was right."

HATHAWAY STANDS FIRM ON DEATH NIGHT STORY DESPITE SEVERE GRILL BY McLYMAN

Newport, R. I., June 23—Elliott R. Hathaway, Fall River's playboy accused in the murder of Verna E. Russell, pretty student nurse, faced severe examination by Atty. Gen. Benjamin M. McLyman today. His testimony follows:

Q.—I call your attention to the afternoon of March 19, at the Republican Committee rooms, where you went to phone the Truesdale Hospital. How far away from you was Galvin sitting? A.—He came in after I had called and sat down about two feet away from me.

Q.—Leaving the hospital that night you started down in the direction of Mayes' place? A.—I wasn't hitting for no regular place. I said could she suggest a place to go and she said we could go and have a few drinks.

Q.—You didn't take it straight the way she did, did you? A.—I didn't take mine straight, no, sir.

Q.—But you took it straight in Galvin's house an hour later that night. A.—Yes, sir; I did.

Q.—How large were the cups you used? Hathaway illustrated with his thumb and forefinger, about four inches.

Q.—How many did you use? A.—Maybe two, maybe four.

Q.—Were there some left? A.—I believe there were.

LONG FINGERNAILS

Q.—How long have you been letting your fingernails grow? A.—They've always been like that as far as I know.

Q.—At the Rhode Island State Institution when you came there on March 26 they weren't that way, were they? A.—I think they were.

Q.—As a matter of fact, they were clipped and cut very short, were they not? A.—I don't think so, no, sir.

Q.—You suggested going out toward the Narrows? A.—I said we would drive that way.

Q.—But you didn't go there? A.—Miss Russell said she didn't care to go that way. She said she would just as soon go to Stafford rd.

Q.—When you first parked after you went up Pleasant st. (that's where you had some drinks, wasn't it? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You had two drinks? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who selected Windward lane, when you started out again? A.—When we started out, we just went down there, because it's near.

Q.—Winward lane is not lighted, is it? A.—Well, it's not so dark there.

Q.—You say you turned to the left, and went in about 200 feet? A.—Yes, sir; that's right.

Q.—No lights in there? A.—I do not remember any.

LIGHT TURNED OFF

Q.—You had the lights of your car turned off? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—But you say you put the dashlight on? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And that dashlight illuminates the dial? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And you suggested a drink in there? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—How many drinks did that make? A.—Three.

Q.—When you had your first drink, you were in the driver's seat? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now will you tell us how she got over in the back seat? A.—She turned down the back of the seat and stepped over back. I turned the seat up, and pushed it into the dashboard. Then I got over.

Q.—Now, while you were on the back seat, you suggested another drink? A.—Yes, sir, but not right away.

Q.—Now, while you were there, was there some activity on your part when you placed your hand on her thigh? A.—Yes, sir. I did.

Q.—How long did you sit there that way? A.—I couldn't say.

Q.—Well, then you poured yourself a drink. A.—I poured Miss Russell one, and then I poured myself one.

NO LONGER CALM

Hathaway explained how he poured the drink, first pouring ginger ale and the gin. McLyman was now thundering his questions at the witness, who appeared to be wilting. Hathaway was no longer the carefree, nonchalant witness of yesterday.

Q.—You didn't mean it, then, when you told me that you filled your cup half full of gin, and then poured the ginger ale in? A.—I always pour ginger ale first.

Q.—She didn't want any ginger ale? A.—She was not fussy about it.

Q.—She told you not to get any for her? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And then you say you heard a bottle drop? A.—Yes, sir. I heard the bottle drop, and I looked at her, and she was sagged over. Her hands were up to her chest, and crossed this way (demonstrating).

Q.—What did you do? A.—I put my hand on her back and slapped it. She was sagging. I asked her what the matter was. She went forward, and I grabbed her.

Q.—She didn't fall on the floor? A.—No, sir, she was sagging.

Q.—Your right hand was on her back? A.—Yes, sir. I had my hand there.

Q.—Was she sitting on the seat at the time? A.—Yes, sir, she was sitting on the edge.

Q.—She didn't get on the floor, though, did she? A.—She was partly on the floor.

Q.—Then she was off the seat? A.—No, sir, not exactly.

Q.—Well, show us how she was. Hathaway demonstrated, by bending his knees on the witness stand, showing that the girl was in a kneeling position on the seat.

Q.—How far down did she go before you stopped her? Hathaway demonstrated by placing his hands up to his armpits.

Q.—Well, you pulled her by the shoulders back onto the seat? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Just where was she; between the seat and floor, half way? A.—Yes, sir.

DEMONSTRATES GRIP

Q.—What was holding her up? A.—I grabbed her. It was a tedious job. She was kind of heavy, but I got her back.

Q.—How long did that take you, five minutes? A.—I got hold of her and lifted her up on the seat. Her head was sagging. I kept talking to her, and I put my right hand on her mouth, like this, to hold her head up.

Q.—Now, will you put your right hand on my mouth, and show this jury just how you did it?

Hurley objected, and a tilt followed between McLyman and the defense counsel.

Judge Walsh: "The witness has testified that the girl was sitting on his right, and now he says that he put his right hand up to her mouth. Objection overruled, and the demonstration may take place."

McLyman: "I will stand here on the right, where Miss Russell was, and you show the jury how you did it."

Hathaway: "I couldn't do it that way now, because I was on the other side."

McLyman: "Oh, you moved from your position."

Q.—Well, will you demonstrate on me how you moved? The witness placed his hands under McLyman's armpits, demonstrated how he lifted Miss Russell onto the seat, then sat on her right side.

Q.—And now, McLyman said, now it's convenient for your right hand to go at her throat? A.—She fell forward.

Q.—And when you first went on the back seat, you were on her left side? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—She slipped off, you picked her up and put her on the seat, and then you sat on her right? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And that's where you stayed? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And then what happened? A.—Her head was sagging and I put my hand like this to hold her head up. (The witness placed his right hand on his own chest and moved it upward by degrees till it had it on his throat.)

Q.—When your hand was up there, you weren't pressing, were you? A.—She was kind of heavy.

Q.—You were giving her some force? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Then in order to hold her head up you put your hand on her throat, and was pushing gently? A.—Yes, sir. She was heavy.

TRIED TO REVIVE HER

Q.—Now it was only the upper part of her body that you were pushing back? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you do anything to try to revive her? A.—I took my hat off and fanned her.

Q.—When you were sitting there with your hand on her thigh, did you have your hat on? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—When you got through fanning her, what did you do? The witness stepped down off the stand, demonstrated on McLyman how he took the girl under the arms, turned her body around and sat it on the floor with the back up against the front seat, which was tilted over.

In answer to questioning as to where he was standing when he shifted the body of Miss Russell onto the floor of the car preparatory to taking it out, the witness said that he removed his fur coat, put it on the driver's seat, and then was standing on the running board of the car after opening the door.

McLyman—"Will you now show us how you took her out of the car."

The witness demonstrated on Mr. McLyman by placing his hands under McLyman's armpits, when suddenly McLyman shot at him: "You dragged her out?"

A.—No, sir. I wouldn't say that. I done the best I could.

Q.—Did you sit her on the running board? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Well, you took her out for purpose of giving her air? A.—Yes, sir, that's right.

Q.—You could have sat her on the running board to give her air, couldn't you? A.—No, sir; she was sagging.

Q.—You held her under the shoulder of the coat, 30 inches below the road, where she could get less air? A.—Yes, sir.

At this point a 10-minute recess was ordered.

Q.—(Referring to Hathaway's visit to Galvin's home). He just put his clothes on over his pajamas, didn't he? A.—I guess he did. I heard him testify that.

Q.—You spent about an hour at the Galvin house? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You had two drinks, didn't you? A.—Yes, sir.

GIRL LYING DEAD

Q.—And during that time of more than an hour, while you were sitting there, having drinks of gin and talking about a holdup, that girl that you thought might be alive was lying out there alone in Winward lane? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Why did you go to Galvin's house at all? A.—I wanted someone with me that I knew.

Q.—What could Galvin do for that girl that you couldn't? A.—I went there. I wanted someone to help.

Q.—Did you feel that you had done something wrong? A.—No, sir. I done everything I could for the girl.

Q.—You had nothing to fear. Why didn't you leave Winward lane, and go to a doctor, or the nearest home? Why didn't you go to the police station? A.—I couldn't figure it out. I didn't understand about it. It happened so suddenly.

Q.—You want the jury to think that Miss Russell did everything first, don't you? She made the first smile? A.—Yes, she did, sir.

Q.—She sought to meet the boy in the fur coat? She suggested the gin? She suggested going to Stafford rd.? She suggested returning because it was near 10 o'clock and she had to go back? You want the jury to think she made those suggestions, don't you? Hathaway's mumbled answer was inaudible.

Q.—But you did suggest a drink when you got the gin, didn't you? A.—Yes sir.

Q.—And you suggested that might get into the back seat? A.—Yes, sir. Iasked her was she comfortable.

Q.—You say when Galvin came back with you out there—what time did you and Galvin arrive back there? A.—Around one o'clock I guess.

Q.—Galvin seemed frightened? A.—He did, sir.

NOT FRIGHTENED

Q.—But you weren't frightened? A.—I was upset over what had happened.

Q.—He had nothing to be frightened of? A.—No sir, and neither did I.

Q.—Galvin didn't feel of her pulse and her heart, did he? A.—I don't know. I didn't see her there just then.

Q.—What did you go out there for? A.—I went to Galvin's and we went out there.

Q.—When you got him there what did you do? A.—I said: "There he is." He said: "She's dead, Pinky." I said I was afraid of that.

Q.—You didn't stop then to take her back to the hospital, did you? A.—No, Chick got into the car and said: "Let's get out of here."

Q.—Why didn't you take the girl to the hospital then? A.—I tell you why, Mr. McLyman. Chick said: "Let's get out of here," I followed his advice.

Q.—You had three chances to take that body away and you left it there on the cold ground in the lane? A.—Yes, sir, I did.

Q.—And then you had another chance to take that body away? A.—My mind was too upset. What happened I couldn't understand.

D.—Did you do anything to make yourself understood? A.—I took Chick's advice.

Q.—You would take such directions from a friend when he body was lying there on the cold ground in Winward lane? Objection. Sustained.

VISITED UNCLE

Q.—You went to see your uncle that next morning, didn't you? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And you told him you were involved in a jam? A.—I did.

Q.—Did he ask you where you had been all night? A.—He didn't ask me.

Q.—When did you park your car that night? A.—I took the car and parked it, and telephoned, and walked around a while.

Q.—Why did you shave off your mustache? A.—I was still taking Calvin's advice to get out of town. That's why I shaved it. I was in an upset state of mind.

Q.—When you signed the hotel register in New York with an assumed name, that was in an upset state of mind? A.—Yes, sir; I was upset.

Q.—You went out that morning and bought a newspaper? What newspaper did you buy? A.—I bought a paper. I can't recollect which.

Q.—Why did you buy a paper? Because you wanted to see the newspaper reports of the death of Verna Russell? A.—I bought a paper because Chick said it looked bad, having an appointment with the girl.

Q.—You bought the paper in Times Square, where the fellow keeps the out-of-town papers? A.—I just happened to be there. I bought a paper; I don't know what paper.

Q.—What did the paper say that led you to believe I wanted to see you? A.—I saw that I was wanted for the murder of erna Russell.

RE-ENACTS CHOKING

Q.—Illustrate to the jury just Hathaway put his hands up to his how this coughing took place, throat. A.—Like a choke and a gag.

Q.—Was it a choke, was it a gag, or was it a cough? A.—It was a choke and a gag.

Q.—You have an idea in your mind that any girl you see wants to meet you? A.—No. I haven't.

Q.—You have an idea you can go out and get any girl you want? A.—No. I have not.

Q.—Why did you have your hand with Verna Russell, when you bought her the gin, when you took her into Winward lane, your whole intention was to possess her, was it not? A.—No, sir.

Q.—As a matter of fact, every move you made was toward that point? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Why did you have your hand on her thigh? A.—It was just natural. Like any fellow out with a girl, it just fell down there natural. I had my arm around her, like that (stretching his arm out).

PAPAL INSULTS PROTESTED

Vatican City, June 23 (AP)—Osservatore Romano today protested against what it termed the illegal sale in Italy of pamphlets insulting the Pope.

The paper, which is used for Vatican pronouncements, says Italy not only has laws that should be enforced against such sales but also a censorship which it is ready enough to use in other directions.

The newspaper charges there are sold in newstands pamphlets such as "Priest, Go Away," by Emilio Settimelli, former editor of the defunct newspaper Impero.

Huge Hawk Battles Man to Draw With Sharpened Talons

Miami, Fla., June 23 (AP)—A battle between Gerald Lanham, county employe, and an irate hawk was a good draw, and Lanham is willing to let it go at that.

Then both retreated, Lanham inside the tower and the hawk to parts unknown.

TEN KILLED IN POWDER BLAST

Wareham, Dorset, Eng., June 23 (AP)—Ten men are known to have been killed in an explosion today at the Royal Naval Cordite Factory at Holton Heath near here. Nineteen persons were injured.

The explosion occurred in the nitro-glycerine department of the factory. One man, two miles distant, was knocked out of his chair by its force. A great column of red smoke shot up from the factory—the color apparently being caused by the bursting of a sulfuric acid tank.

DWYER WARNS OF BEACH PERIL

Charging that 52 persons, mostly women and children, suffered cut feet at South Boston beaches last Sunday, Representative John Dwyer of that district said today that he would demand establishment of first aid stations at the beaches by the city.

The legislator said he would confer with Mayor Curley to obtain better policing and establishment of first aid stations manned by City Hospital internes.

NEW CLUE TO SLAYING IN PROVIDENCE

Untermyer caused a stir at the courthouse, went directly before Judge Wewis Smith of the county court and explained that legal etiquette of his native land, Scotland, were very strict and forbade his revealing any information obtained from a patient.

In spite of assertions by Stanley Faithfull, stepfather of the dead girl, that Dr. Carr knew her and the whole family socially, Dr. Carr maintains his relations with Starr were professional.

According to Dist. Atty. Elvin Edwards, Dr Carr was instructed by the judge that there were no restrictions on him in so far as the state was concerned, nor would he be forced to reveal anything.

Three women testified first. They were Mrs. Jack Barr, Valley rd., Lawrence; Miss Loretta Fitzpatrick of East 90th st., Manhattan and Miss Mary Tobeck, hairdresser at the Grand Central terminal.

Like other witnesses they arrived at the courthouse accompanied by plain clothes policemen who shielded them from interviewers.

Miss Fitzpatrick saw Starr at 2:30 p. m. on Friday, June 5, the day the girl vanished, in the Grand Central station. Starr had an appointment with Miss Tubeck which she did not keep. Mrs. Barr, it is understood, met her on a Mediterranean cruise a few years ago.

DR. CARE CALLED

Dr. Carr was then called and he entered the room alone, taking with him the three letters received from Starr, one forecasting her death.

Earlier today Faithfull said the one letter made public in full—in which Starr apologized for her conduct on the Francesia, Dr. Carr's ship—could not have been written by her, as it was "not her style."

After a few minutes the jury recessed for the noon hour, and Dr. Carr, with Attorney Untermyer, started for the Garden City Hotel.

"The bogey man," he replied, with a hearty laugh.

"Sam, we're old friends, aren't we?" said Dr. Carr.

"Are you going to be more talkative today than yesterday?" asked a girl reporter.

"How am I to know?" retorted the doctor, and he politely parried all further questions.

Edelman and Goldstein, the taxi drivers whose stories have puzzled the authorities considerably because they do not check with the stories of others, was present to testify, as was C. W. Anderson, the Greenwich Village artist, for whom Starr posed.

NEW PROVIDENCE CLUE

The Providence youth, whose name the officials say may come out before the mystery is solved, is believed to be the mysterious "J," who sent two telegraphic love messages to Elizabeth Tucker Faithfull, sister of Starr, following an unexpected visit by the latter to Providence.

Diary excerpts made public today by a person who was given an opportunity of reading them included the following:

1927—"Kept my diet yesterday. I'm depressed. Feel as if I exercised a million hours."

1928—"Another day of depression. Blue Monday. What can I expect? Dawn will soon be here. Damn it."

"Edwin M. is now under obligations to me. Oh, God. I love him. I love him. I love him. I am poignantly, passionately in love with him. Oh, God! Oh, God! Oh, God!"

April, 1928—"Just a year ago today. Happy memories are few. Oh, hell!"

There was mention of somebody receiving $40,000, the person who read the diary entries said, but the details could not be recalled.

PLAYBOY OFF STAND

down on her thigh." He demonstrated, placing his hand on Mc-Lyman's thigh.

A.—As a matter of fact, you were forcing your attentions on her?

A.—I did not.

Q.—And she resisted you? A.—I did not.

DENIES CHOKING

Q.—The girl told you that she was a girl of honor, didn't she?

A.—There was no talk about anything like that.

Q.—And you choked that girl; but you didn't go beyond where she resisted, did you? A.—I did not.

Q.—You didn't come into Rhode Island until you had seen your lawyer, did you? You didn't get in touch with me until you had a lawyer? A.—I just called for my folks, that's all. And the lawyer came with my brother.

Q.—You talked with your brother a couple of hours, didn't you? A.—Yes, sir, I talked to my brother.

End of cross-examination. No redirect examination by Hurley.

NEARLY EXHAUSTED

Hathaway went over to the defense counsel on his way from the stand, and sank into his seat. He appeared exhausted from the final minutes of the strain.

The next witness called by Hurley was Dr. James Hamilton of Providence.

As Hurley called Hamilton, McLyman signalled to Dr. George B. Magrath and Dr. Charles A. Bryant, who came over and sat with the attorney-general, and prepared to take notes on Dr. Hamilton's testimony.

Hamilton, said that he was a physician, a pathologist, and a specialist in cardiology and heart disease. He said he was a member of the Providence Medical Association, the Rhode Island and American Medical Association. He said that he had served as an interne at the Rhode Island State Hospital, and while in the hospital served in the laboratory, and also the medical and surgical department.

He said at present he did work for a number of hospitals. He said he had taken a course in heart diseases in the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. That he was attached to the pathological department of the St. Joseph's hospital in Providence.

That in 1917 he was called to the Army Medical school in Washington, and after serving on the medical staff at Camp Greeley, Georgia, he was sent to Columbia University for medical training, and then went to France and served at a number of base hospitals during the rest of the war. He said he had considerable experience on foreign articles in the breathing apparatus.

Q.—Doctor, will you state the effect of foreign bodies getting into the breathing apparatus?

McLyman objection. Overruled.

The doctor said that foreign articles in the breathing apparatus, depending, of course upon their size, affect the tissues of the throat, larynx and other organs of the throat.

"They will cause," said Dr. Hamilton, "extreme irritation and spasms of the respiratory system, depending, of course, where the foreign body lodges. And they also cause coughing and choking."

Q.—Doctor, what effect would State's Exhibit RR, which is the piece of tooth which has been testified was found in the throat of Miss Russell, have on the tharyngo-epiglottic ligament?

Day objected, on the ground that it had not been shown that the exhibit was in the throat before or after death. Sustained.

SHANLEY FACES DISBARMENT

A petition for disbarment of Michael M. Shanly, Boston attorney, for alleged "unprofessional conduct, deceit, malpractice and gross misconduct," was filed in Superior Court today by the Boston Bar Association.

Against Attorney Shanly, who was admitted to the bar in 1914, the bar association alleges that in January, 1928, he was paid $25 by Philip A. Dillan to file a divorce suit, and that the suit was not entered, notwithstanding a statement by Shanly to Dillan that the case was pending.

According to another charge, Shanly became counsel for Mrs. Anna M. Murphy, who was charged in 10 counts with larceny from a department store.

She pleaded guilty and was given a chance to make restitution.

On April 1, 1930, the Bar Association alleges, John C. McCluskey, a brother of Mrs. Murphy, gave Shanly $356, of which $50 were to go to Shanly and the balance toward restitution, and on June 2, 1930, McCluskey gave Shanly $120 more.

Shanly is declared to have given a note for $450 to McCluskey, which note never was paid, but subsequently Shanly paid McCluskey $375.

The charges state that on January 15, 1930, Mrs. Murphy appeared in court for sentence and was told by Shanly that she could not make restitution, She then was sentenced to the Women's Reformatory at Sherborn.

At that time, the petition states, Shanly had in his hands $500 for restitution.

As a result of McCluskey's subsequent investigation, the case was laid before Governor Allen who on January 1, 1931, ordered Mrs. Murphy's release.

F. J. Gross Dead in Maine

Auburn, Me., June 23 (AP)—Frederick J. Gross, 64, treasurer of Field Brothers & Gross, shoe manufacturers, died today. A widow and three children survive.

INDICTMENTS IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, June 23—Secret indictments following nine day's investigation of Lawrence city engineering department were returned today to Judge Cox in Superior court by Essex County grand jury which had heard 30 witnesses.

The engineering department is under the administration of Alderman John W. McCarthy.

Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Cregg said he would not comment on the indictments.

He said the indictments would not be acted upon until September.

MAYOR AND 14 MORE INDICTED IN BRIBERY

Detroit, June 23 (AP)—The mayor of the suburb of Hamtramck and 14 other persons, including several public officials, were named in 15 indictments handed down by a circuit court grand jury Saturday, a prosecution official attached to the jury announced today.

Howard Bowman, an assistant prosecuting attorney, who made the announcement, said seven indictments were returned against Mayor Rudolph G. Tenerowicz.

Three major charges in the indictments include conspiracy to accept bribes in the operation of disorderly houses, in the accepting of bribes in city dump contracts and in contracts for the department of public works.

75,000 TO JOIN KEY PARADE

Atlanta, June 23 (AP)—A parade its promoters predict will include 75,000 persons was being arranged today to welcome Mayor James L. Key from his tour of France, where he described prohibition as a "failure."

Although both the Methodist and Presbyterian ministers' associations have adopted resolutions protesting the welcome as anti-prohibition propaganda, Rev. Robert Z. Tyler, pastor of the Grace Methodist Church of which Key is a steward and where he teaches a Bible class, announced that he would be at the station to greet the mayor as "a personal friend."

Mr. Tyler added that "Mr. Key has a right to his personal views, which I have known for a long time, but to which I do not subscribe."

The mayor's Bible class voted Sunday to participate in the welcome. Six bands, including the Negro Elks' Band, are on the welcome program. The Electrical Workers' Quartet will sing "Happy Days Are Here Again," one of Mr. Key's favorites.

AGAINST SCHOOLS' USE

City Censor John M. Casey is strenuously opposed to the use of public school halls and theaters for commercial purposes by outside organizations. He says he has a promise of co-operation from the school authorities. Rental of these school halls and a school theater at very low prices has resulted in complaints from proprietors of other places whose business has been materially affected despite the fact that they pay taxes and license fees to the city.

WHY DO AUTOMOBILES WIND UP IN THE GRAVEYARD ?

Meet Mr. Michael Moed, owner of one of the world's largest auto "graveyards."

"I own an Automobile Graveyard," says Michael Moed. "Listen to me."

"SOONER or later every car has to die, just like every man. But too many die too soon; and I'll tell you why—

"Their owners never give them half-decent lubrication. They go along greasing them here and there—any old way.

"They never stop to realize that a car has 40 or 50 (sometimes even 70) different points that must be lubricated—and lubricated with their own proper lubricant, too.

"It's all right with me. It keeps my graveyard busy. But, honest, I can't understand how people can be so careless and so silly."

(Signed) Michael Moed

Twelve thousand men have been specially trained in schools conducted by Socony automotive engineers. Special charts have been developed in cooperation with the engineers of the various automobile companies.

The man who gives your car Socony Certified Lubrication, works from a chart which shows every single point to be lubricated and the proper lubricant to use.

He has the tools. He has the training. He has the highest-quality lubricants. He does not guess; he does not skip. He works quickly, and thoroughly.

When he has finished working on your car, he hands you a receipt certifying that every single lubrication point has been properly attended to.

Hence the name—Socony Certified Lubrication.

COLT THINKS HE HAS FOUND THE SCENE WHERE THE SLAYING WAS COMMITTED

City Forester Identifies the Leaf Found in the Death Boat as Coming From a Tree Similar to One Near First Ave.

"THE MURDER OF THE CHOIR SINGER"
BY ANTHONY ABBOT

What Has Happened So Far.

A rowboat containing the bodies of a minister and a good-looking young woman is found drifting in the East River. Both have been shot and the woman's throat cut. Thatcher Colt, police commissioner, rushes to the scene and orders the boat with its gruesome burden carried into the morgue. In the boat a cat with blood on its paws is caught. A ring and wrist watch have been removed from the clergyman's hand, and in his pocket is found part of a love letter. Colt picks up a leaf from the bottom of the boat. District Attorney Dougherty plans to question a man named Twistle, and his girl friend, who found the bodies. Impressions are made of the cat's paws.

Now Go on With the Story:

INSPECTOR FEGLEY watched while we fingerprinted the cat's paws.

"Are the lines on a cat's paws all different, as in human fingerprints, Mr. Commissioner?" he asked skeptically.

"I fancy not. Nevertheless, I am hoping these impressions may be useful to us. Tony, will you take charge of them, please?" And as I put the chart carefully beside the love letter, he added:

"Please have Merkle take a micro-photograph of the marks of the watch and ring on the wrist and finger of the man. And Doctor Multooler may go ahead with the autopsies. I shall want a report to my home as soon as it is available."

Three minutes later we emerged from the gloomy tunnel under 20th st. into the warmer but clean fresh air of the waterfront and hurried toward the Commissioner's car.

"Drive up 2nd ave.," directed Colt, with a wave of his hand to the patient Neil McMahon. "And take it easy."

"What are we looking for now?" I ventured to ask as the car turned and shot up westward toward the avenue.

"I am looking for a tree," confided Colt with a chuckle. He tapped his breast pocket.

"A leaf fell from a tree into the boat," he explained. "As I told you, it is my belief that these murders were committed on shore, the bodies put into the boat, then the boat launched and shoved out into the tide. We must find the spot where all this was done. And our only clue is the leaf."

LOOKING FOR A TREE

"Do you expect to find the tree growing along the East Side waterfront?" I asked banteringly.

"Yes," replied Thatcher Colt, and reinpsed into a reproachful silence.

After a while I tried again.

"Chief?"

"Well, Tony?"

"I don't want to seem more stupid than usual——"

"But?" he chuckled.

"Why do you search the East Side of Manhattan for this mysterious tree? Why couldn't it just as well have been over on the Long Island side—or Blackwell's or way up off the Bronx—"

"Again, nothing but observation and guesswork, Tony. I may be wrong. But I am inclined to believe that it happened in Manhattan. You see, the East River current is very swift around the Hell Gate rocks. If the boat had come through that swirling current, it would have been battered somewhat, or at least the bodies shaken up. You see how peaceably undisturbed they lay—not even a break in her necklace of beads.

"Of course, there is one cardrop missing—but remember that wasn't found in the boat. No, they had a quiet journey. Hence, I think it happened farther down. They could hardly have been launched from Welfare Island, because that is like one huge prison and too well guarded.

A LONG SHOT

"But why," I persisted, "do you assume the crime occurred on the edge of the river?"

"Obviously, because the boat was used to get the victims away from the scene.

"It would have to be close, because of the limited space anywhere in New York—and because one couldn't drag two bodies and a boat a long distance without the almost certain risk of exposure."

"Thanks, chief. I'm still in the dark," I replied and I heard his characteristic chuckle. To me his behavior still seemed unrealistic and extravagant.

"Stop here!" called Colt suddenly, and we left the car. We had arrived at Second ave. and Forty-second st. Two blocks to our left was Pershing sq., with its ramp; its pompous hotels, with their windows, golden-lighted; the vast shambles of Grand Central Station; and far to the west, the intense electric glow of Times sq.

Between where we stood and the river was a geometrical group of apartment houses, trimmed with lawns and trees, green boxes, and with railings that bordered the water—a colony called Tudor City, of which real estate troubadors sing their most plaintive ballads. It was opposite this restricted residential section that Twistie and his girl friend had found the row-boat.

Slowly Colt walked down to the river. There is, at this point, a tunnel going under the street, falling steeply to a dock at the brink of the water. It is dark and lonely there, especially at this late hour; many hold-ups had been reported in this vicinity.

Out on the dock walked Colt. Turning, with his back to the river, he looked north and south.

A TALK WITH LEDERER

"Not many trees around here. At Eighty-sixth st. there is the Carl Schurs Park. Couldn't be there," he meditated aloud. "Where—oh, where—Tony?"

A TALK WITH LEDERER

"Not many trees around here. At Eighty-sixth st. there is the Carl Schurs Park. Couldn't be there," he meditated aloud. "Where—oh, where—Tony?"

He glanced at his watch, the luminous paint on the octagonal dial gleaming in his palm.

"Lederer will be in his office in 10 minutes. He's our only hope—and a pretty thin one."

Five minutes of Neil McMahon's heart-rending driving and we were drawn up in front of the Arsenal where Lederer had his office, and where he had agreed to meet Colt.

Saluting two astonished shirt-sleeved sergeants taking their ease in chairs before the entrance, Colt led the way up a dark corridor toward a door with a glass panel, behind which gleamed light. On the glass, in gilt and black letters, we read "City Forester."

Sitting behind his desk expectantly and in high good spirits was William Lederer, the guardian of the New York trees. In spite of his florid cheeks and healthy air, there was something professorial in Lederer's appearance; at least, the stooped shoulders and the horn-rimmed glasses gave me the impression of a student. At our entrance he rose and extended his hand.

"Mr. Colt, I am thrilled at all this," he confessed. "It 's quite an experience to be dragged out of bed to help solve a murder case.

Until now my experience has been limited to combating the murder of our poor New York trees," and he waved his hand toward a group of tree models on a table across the room.

THE TREE OF HEAVEN

"With which I heartily sympathize," returned Colt, searching in his pocket and producing the leaf. He laid it on the desk, and Lederer leaned over to study it—a large, compound leaf, with numerous pairs of long-pointed leaflets, plain margined, except for a tooth or two near the base.

"You recognize that, of course?" insinuated Thatcher Colt.

Lederer glanced up with a bright smile.

"It is from a very ordinary tree," he responded. "Lot of people call it the Tree of Heaven. But it is nothing more than the everyday Chinese sumac. You see, the leaf looks like a sumac—we get them in pink, red and bronze. There used to be great numbers of them in New York—now our department discourages the Tree of Heaven as much as possible and they are gradually disappearing."

"Why is that?" asked Colt.

"Well, they are excellent shade trees—handsome, quick growing fellows with spreading branches, but they are a favorite with the caterpillars, you see, and that settled it with us. It had to."

"Of course," agreed Colt. "Are there many left in the city?"

KNOWS EVERY ONE

"Thousands and thousands," answered the City Forester cheerfully.

Colt turned his disappointed eyes on me. He had hoped that fate had dropped in the rowboat a leaf of rarer growth. The one clue we had found in the boat was rapidly crumbling into nothing.

"I suppose," he began slowly, "that you would not have any record of the locations of the various Trees of Heaven in Manhattan, would you?"

"We know the location of every tree in New York. Every one is indexed and cross-indexed," crowed Lederer glowingly. "Our trees are indexed according to their variety and also to their city locations. I can find them, one way or the other. But I have to tell you, Mr. Colt, that there are so many Chinese sumacs in Manhattan that it would take half a day to add them all up."

His self-possession Colt turned to his pipe. As he was filling the bowl, he asked another question.

"Could you ascertain in a reasonably short time if there are many Chinese sumacs on the east side water front?"

Mr. Lederer rubbed his hands gleefully.

PLACING THE TREES

"I can tell you now there are precious few, Mr. Colt. In the first place, there are not so many trees of any kind on the east side water front. Too many factories and wharves. But just let me take a look."

His footsteps echoing on the stone floor of the office, Lederer crossed to a large filing cabinet and began running his hands through a drawer packed with cards tipped with colored index tabs.

"Ailanthus glandulosa," he hummed, and, looking over his shoulder, he confided that that was the scientific name, an amblyon word that probably meant the Tree of the Gods. "It makes a marvelous wood," he added, going back to his cards, "fine and satiny—"

Presently he turned and faced us. He was beaming.

"There are three places where there are Trees of Heaven on the east side water front," he announced. "One is in a private yard at One Hundred and Twelfth st., about a block back from the river."

Colt nodded with eager deliberation; there was an intense gleam of hope in his large brown eyes.

"And number two?"

"Carl Schurs Park."

Colt shook his head.

"The third," added Mr. Lederer, "is on a lawn behind a group of First Avenue houses called Sangster Terrace, and the lawn runs down directly to the brink of the river."

Colt's hand gripped my arm with nervous strength, as he exclaimed:

"That is the one spot along the waterfront where this crime would have been done most effectively. How stupid I was not to have thought of it before."

Abruptly he turned to Lederer, thanked him hastily, and we rushed out of the office, down the staircase, and into the car.

"Sangster Terrace—and step on it!"

Copyright, 1931, by Covici-Friede Co.

(Amazing developments occur at Sangster Terrace. Read Wednesday's exciting installment.)

"The third," added Mr. Lederer, "is on a lawn behind a group of First ave. houses, running to the river."

MRS. DUDLEY PICKMAN

At Raceland yesterday the same generous hospitality was evident as in previous years—thousands of people crowded the beautiful country estate of Mr. Macomber and, although the buildings are in the process of construction after the fire, the setting looking over the course could not have been more beautiful. It was a perfect day, clear and cool, and the interest and excitement ran high.

* * *

Mrs. Dudley Pickman strolled around the paddock with Mr. Pickman, who has grown so boyish since his recent marriage that we hardly recognized him. She looked very girlish in a dark brown print with large hat.

* * *

Another attractive couple were Mrs. Roger Wolcott and William Prescott Wolcott, whom we think may be her son, although they looked more like brother and sister. Mrs. Robert Herrick, escorted by her sunshade, beamed broadly at us, but was camera-shy—a Boston malady—for which we are regretful, as she has an outstanding personality. Better luck next time. Everybody in the equine world was on hand, it seemed, and likewise everyone had a great time.

Bride Tries to Dodge Cameras

WE GOT BACK IN TOWN just in time to see Mrs. William Elkins run into her carriage in her tulle and calla lilies, and then, as though regretting such haste, she kissed Bill and smiled at the crowd. The bridesmaids looked stunning in orange chiffon with delphinium bouquets.

TEA DANCE AT HARDING ESTATE TODAY FOR MISS LESLIE BLAKE

Dedham Scene of Party for Debutante

One of the most important of the few preliminary debutante affairs to be given this spring and summer, is the tea dance this afternoon in honor of Miss Leslie Blake, at which Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lewis Harding, her uncle and aunt, will be hosts. It is at 5 o'clock on their beautiful Dedham estate, Burntwood, where they receive many friends of all ages.

Miss Blake is the charming daughter of the Arthur Blakes, also of Dedham, and promises, from what we hear already, though she has only been home from school in Florence two weeks, to be one of the most popular debs of the coming season.

The Blake sisters, for Miss Harriet, who came out last year, is Miss Leslie's sister, seem to take turns going abroad and coming out alternately, as the former is now in Milan, Italy.

Later, when the season is really "on," the Blakes will probably entertain at a dance for their daughter. After this week they will move down to Cohasset, where they have gone for several summers, until September.

Boston Couple With Notables at Paris Fete

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL

Paris, June 23, (US)—Paris today is reveling in what to its international social world is the climax of the year for the capital of fashion—the incomparable Grande Semaine.

If you belong to the international fashionable elite, this week is the most important in the whole 52. It is during this week that the lady of fashion makes the most lavish display of her wardrobe, and rival rulers of the fashion world can check their victories and defeats in the perennial social battle.

Of course, everyone is looking her smartest and best. For instance, the afternoon teas at the Ritz, which are always numerically well attended, will have this week an atmosphere of especial distinction.

Seen there for tea in the midst of a wealth of colour ranging from dark green to vert d'eau, dark blue to aquamarine, and a wealth of printed chiffons, not to talk of all the various cuts in hats, was Mrs. Marshall Clyde of New York, entertaining a party of five.

Mrs. Clyde wore a dark green cloth coat over a green chiffon blouse, a green cloche hat and silver fox fur.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Steinert, of Boston and Rome, were among the guests. Mrs. Steinert appeared in an aquamarine crepe moire gown with a shocket to which was attached a short bolero. Her hat was in pale blue satin.

Mrs. James Hayden Hyde, formerly Countess Matuschka of Rome, was wearing a blue and pink flowered dress in nouvelline de soie with a blue hat of bahn straw. Her suede gloves and shoes matched.

The most colourful event during the week will be the Grand Prix Des Drags at the Auteuil race course. There will be on display the masterpieces of Paris dressmaking, not only on the large number of mannequins that attend, but also on the women of fashion themselves.

Conspicuous among those present and certain to be garbed in the best taste will be Madame Martinez De Hoz, who is never seen wearing the same hat at any two races, and whose husband owns one of the finest horses, which she follows with the keenest interest.

Among the American enthusiasts are Marquise De Polignac, the former Nina Crosby, Princess Charles Murat, formerly Margaret S. Rutherford, and the Countess Jumilhac, nee Constance Coolidge, of Chicago.

The Ambassadeurs is the great draw for dinner parties. There recently was Mrs. F. Frazier Jelke of New York, entertaining a party of 10. The hostess wore an attractive two-shaded green crepe-satin ensemble.

Parley Brings Fame to Two Women

London, June 23 (US)—Two women, hitherto unknown to the general public, jumped into sudden fame a few days ago. They were Miss Byvoets and Mrs. Sinclair.

The former is housekeeper at No. 10 Downing st., headquarters of the British government, and the other functions in the same capacity at Chequers, the prime minister's week-end home.

Both of the women were guests at the luncheon given by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald to Chancellor Bruening and Finance Minister Curtius of Germany two weeks ago.

Miss Byvoets has been one of the prime minister's family for some years and is credited with being largely responsible for the upbringing of the MacDonald children. She is a Dutch woman, about 50.

Mrs. Sinclair has acted as head of the prime minister's country home for several years.

Cocktails Play Big Part in Reno Life

London, June 23 (US)—Lady Inverclyde's presence in Reno, the American "divorce city," has been the subject of much recent publicity both in London and, of course, abroad. Being quite adept at expressing her views in writing, Lady Inverclyde, disregarding talk of divorces, pens interesting words about prohibition in far Nevada.

"The circuit court," she writes of her Reno experience, "having decided that there is no legal obligation on a municipality to enforce the dry laws, it is possible to secure as much drink as one wants in Reno.

"One can order cocktails, champagne, brandy, whiskey — anything at the Willows, which is the most select speakeasy in Reno. But in order to taste these elsewhere forbidden fruits, and have a little gamble at roulette or dice, you must first pass through two closely guarded doors.

"As there is apparently no fear of a police raid, I presume this is merely a precautionary measure against undesirables."

Lady Inverclyde's view of Reno has caused much comment.

Culter, Mrs. Everett Morss, Mrs. William Lowell Putnam and Mrs. J. H. Lancashire. The show is always very well organized as Mrs. Russell S. Codman is their president.

Anna Dennen Is Dexter Paine's Bride Today

At a noon ceremony today, Miss Anna Hayden Dennen marries Mr. Dexter Seden Paine, son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Paine of 17 Hancock rd., Brookline. The wedding takes place in the little outdoor chapel at East Sebago, Me., where the Rev. Ernest G. and Mrs. Dennen, parents of the bride, make their summer home.

Miss Dennen is attended by her sister, Miss Elizabeth B. Dennen, as maid of honor and by two other sisters, the Misses Jane and Susan, as her bridesmaids.

Mr. Paine, who was graduated from Harvard with the class of 1925, and belongs to the Stix, Pierian and S. A. E. Clubs, is attended by Douglas Brown as his best man.

Miss Dennen made her debut several years ago and is a member of the Junior League. Her husband-to-be is studying at the Harvard Theological School and plans to become a minister.

Concord, with nearly 200 music teachers, students and others enrolled, the Concord summer school of music has opened for another season today.

Wefers-Barba Wedding in Newton

Miss Dorothy Ann Barba, daughter of Mr. Charles E. Barba of 11 Willard st., Newton, was married yesterday to Dr. Bernard Joseph Wefers, Jr., son of Bernard J. Wefers of 249 Mosheim parkway, New York, in the Church of Our Lady of the Presentation by the Rev. James J. Murphy.

Attending the bride was Miss Margarita C. Barba as maid of honor and Miss Thelma Colton and Miss Elizabeth Barba as bridesmaids. Frank Dalton of New York was best man.

The ushers were Milton W. Hayden of New York, Charles C. Barba, Jr., of New Haven, Ct., and Preston A. Barba, William Barba and Francis Barba of Newton.

Dr. Wefers was graduated from New York University Dental School in 1928. His bride is a member of the class of 1930 of the Boston School of Physical Education.

The bride's gown was of white satin with a full-length veil of Brussels lace. She carried a bouquet of white roses, lilies of the valley and gardenias. The maid of honor wore white organdie over yellow taffeta with a large hat of yellow straw. Her flowers were yellow marguerites and bachelor buttons.

How to Stow All You Need in Suit Case

By ANN ARDEN

HOW TO be well dressed on a week end trip and still not have your baggage look as though you were arriving to spend the summer is something of a problem. One small suit case looks like no accommodation at all until you study out the thing and apply condensation methods.

THOSE WHO are doing it constantly agree that the best plan is to wear a light suit of some sort and a sports suit that can do duty in the country, and for outdoor activities is a happy thought. Of course, you would change your more formal accessories when the suit became a play companion.

THE JACKET has sleeves of elbow length, three patch pockets and a stitched belt, fastened with double hook and eye buckle. The sleeveless sweater blouse is of white wool, the belt and neck band are blue, as are the bone buttons marking center front.

THE PANAMA hat has band of blue patent leather. White washable gloves are worn, a blue bracelet stresses color; the blue crepe bag has white bone knob and the shoes are blue with white kid bows.

THE HUMBLE hook and eye is coming right out in public as a decorative fastening. A smart new sport suit fastens its high collar with a huge hook and eye. A new blouse puts hooks and eyes upon its front closing. Even the handbag fastens with jeweled hook and eye. Buttons, too, have overcome any inferiority complex they may have had and proudly advertise their usefulness by taking on decorative contours and colors.

FOR YOUR week-end trip a top coat is a necessity, for motoring or whatever comes your way. Into the suit case put a cotton or silk sport dress, possibly with matching beret. If the occasion demands an evening dress, one of lace lasts out the exigencies of packing better than any other. You must have a pair of evening sandals. An extra sweater might be useful. You will need a pair of pajamas, and a soft negligee.

* * *

THIS is all you actually will need and if you are motoring to the country, you will not be hogging space with too big a bag. Also if you go by train and porters are hard to find it is not too heavy a load for you to carry yourself. Thus does the week end visitor make things easy for herself and not too portentious for her hostess.

CAPITAL'S SCANDALS LACK THRILLS

—By Gilbert Seldes—

THE PRESIDENT'S speech at the dedication of the Harding memorial was comparatively successful. It did not deny that scandals existed and it said what most people believe, that Harding was misled and betrayed. The speech did not offend the common sense and the memory of the American people, and, on the other hand, it did not offend Harding's Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty.

It would hardly have been appropriate for the President to say what many people felt at the time—that the scandals of the Ohio gang were peculiarly dreary. The amounts of money involved were large enough, but all the circumstances (except the tragic ones) were terribly commonplace. We got our tradition of scandals partly from French history and partly from E. Phillips Oppenheim, and both of these are far more exciting than the shirt-sleeved poker games which figured in Washington.

No Femmes to Chercher

The "woman angle" is particularly dreary in these stories and the whole episode lacks distinguished and attractive adventuress. There is no mysterious pearl necklace and no vital and secret papers upon which war and peace depend. (These are not elements in a mystery story; they occur in absolute facts in the fantastic Memoirs of Madame Steinheil, and the pearls and the documents came to her from Felix Faure, the President of France. Incidentally, her account of the murder of her mother and her husband—of which she was accused—is, better than all, but a small handful of mystery yarns.)

Not Vicious, Not Interesting

I wonder whether this lack of viciousness in Washington does not account for our general indifference to what goes on in that city. Once in a while a powerful personality breaks through the dead calm, and Alice Roosevelt has the honor of being one it twice—with circumspection as the daughter of a President, with some wit as the wife of the Speaker of the House. But it shows how low the average is in Washington that a trivial matter of precedence in going into dinner should become a topic of national conversation.

With the whole political intelligence of the country presumably concentrated there, no overwhelming repartee is recorded, nor magnificent week-ends, and only the smallest of scandals. The last good thing I recall from Washington is the ambition of a minor clerk involved in a graft investigation to have an automobile as long as a city block. Where do the Washingtonians go on their week-ends? The English, if we can believe their fiction, are all invited to great country houses where political deals are made and scandals are hushed, and a few good murders take place. It is a high price to pay, but it serves to keep the eye of the whole country on its government.

Going to Antibes?

Although 50,000 less passports have been issued this year than in 1929, a sufficient number of Americans will be seeing Europe, and of this number a good proportion will make their way to the south of France and get as near to Antibes as they can. They will be encouraging one of the most erratic adventures in snobbery ever undertaken. Eight years ago the name of Antibes was virtually unknown. It was a place to buy petrol if you ran short between Cannes and Nice, and had a magnificently situated hotel, which was always closed in summer. In the hot months, the French avoid their own Riviera like the pest, preferring Deauville or Biarritz, where bathing is not such a pleasure.

Antibes in those days had few attractions. Its little beach lacks the charm and warmth of Cannes, and except for bathing there was nothing to do. It was discovered by an American who wanted to do nothing and to take a large family to a small and obscure place. The English had always favored the big towns on either side of it—the rich going there in winter and the poor in summer. In the next few years something extraordinary happened to Antibes. A few writers, a few actors and half a dozen rich people whose names are in the society columns went down there.

The "Right" Place

And then, with a rush, it became an obligatory stop-over on the trip from Paris to Venice. Presently it became "exclusive" and at the same time, of course, popular. People who wanted to write smart stories always brought in surf riding at Antibes, or at a minimum, if the scene was laid in America, mentioned the Antibes shirt. A string of cabins appeared on the beach and a night club opened. The total result is that Antibes is no longer quiet and is still fairly dull. But it is fashionable.

Babbitt et Cie

Close by is the town of Juan-les-Pins, to which South Americans, Levantines, impoverished Russians and American newspapermen frequently go. It has no chic, but the Casino there is beautifully placed and used to serve one of the best lunches in the world for about fifty cents. The financing of the place and of its new hotels comes largely from Americans. But it is not an American who put up the advertising signs which the Babbitt-haters would do well to contemplate.

For ten years the American real estate man has been the butt of intellectuals entire. The very fact that he wished to be called "realtor" has been considered incredibly ridiculous. He has been contrasted with the dignified and almost aristocratic Frenchman. And all around Juan-les-Pins you can see a sign put up by the local Chamber of Commerce, which goes beyond any realtors' excesses, because it actually calls upon the Almighty to testify to the virtues of the surrounding country in these words: "God! How Pleasant Summer Is In Juan-les-Pins!"

Spring Storm.

I catch my breath for sudden thirst of youth,
Which is gone by and will not come again.
Youth thaw! Youth sweet suffering and great with grief.
Hoping for truth.
Hoping for this slow certain peace in vain . . . .
Storms that blew wild and tore fresh flower and leaf.
Green boughs swept wide by tearing winds of sorrow.
Weighed down by dripping pain . . . .
Yet—that fresh wind that blew then—
That sweet rain!

Bird Boozers

—By Idwal Jones—

Drunkenness among birds. This subject has a perennial charm for me, though much neglected by scientists. In my impressionable years I lived near an orchard, to which nightingales came every August.

These birds were periodical boozers. They got terribly drunk on the apples that fell and grew squashy and alcoholic in the sun. All day long they beaked the nectar, got squiffed, then camped in the trees.

There was certainly music in those nightingales, all lit inside from the flowing bowl. They made night riotous with their bacchanalian glee.

A very bad example to youth, this. I believed everything in the physiology book, then, and I expected them to succumb to cirrhosis of the liver.

Dr. - Hanzlik—the California pharmacopoist—has just finished his inquiry into the case of five pigeons he kept drunk for two years on pure alcohol. They became soaks like the old fellows in the Spoon River livery stable, and got so they turned up their beaks at water. The dispatch adds: "After the two-year spree he killed them and found their organs wholly unharmed. He concluded that the dangers of drinking came from impurities in alcohol and liquor."

What the Doctor was after was to see how much there really was in this cirrhosis myth. He found their livers unaffected. Two years are not long enough, you say? Ah, but a two-year span in the life of a serious drinking pigeon is equivalent to 18 years in the life of a human.

I wish the doctor had gone into the mental reactions of these birds. It would be interesting to compare notes with him.

For six months, when I was on a schooner plying to Mexican ports, I was well acquainted with an inebriate rooster.

The cook had a whole crate of hens, which he had engaged to lay eggs. Their refusal to do so embittered him. These birds had the run of the ship in fine weather, and the cook one day threw a piece of bread sopped in claret to a promising young rooster aged six months.

He was a Cornish Indian game fowl, but rather shy and retiring. He swallowed that chunk in one gulp, and hung around in hopes of more. Every meal time the cook fed him that stuff.

He got so that he wouldn't eat anything else, was continually scolded, and the sailors, pleased at his intelligence, nick-named him Chico.

Alcohol gave a great stimulus to his imagination. He sloughed off a habit that was an inheritance of his species from the Dawn Age. He no longer roosted. He squatted at the doorstep of the galley all night.

It was impossible for him to enter the coop, for the other birds drove him out with beak and claw. They had a curious distrust for him. He was isolated, and driven to find solace in the company of sailors.

Darwin speaks somewhere on the fear of wild species for those whose habits differ from their own. Chico gave himself over to revelry or long hours of agreeable stupor in the galley. The cook was always stumbling over him, and getting upset by his squawks. So one day, he slew Chico and boiled him with dumplings.

He was an extraordinary fowl, and since we had been interested in mental reactions we couldn't eat him. That would have been cannibalism.

Book Rackets

By Charles Hanson Towne—

WE FIND THAT OUR book publishers are not above their little rackets these days.

It is a racket similar to that practised by our theatrical producers. These ask exorbitant prices for seats at the premiere. Twelve dollars and fifty cents is nothing at all. It is more apt to be twice that amount, plus the tax. And all the exhibitionists in town rush to obtain their places at the gala first night.

The performance is not apt to be half as good, for everyone is nervous. Lines are forgotten, and the audience chuckles at these slips, like children at some elder's discomfiture. Everyone feels that he has been let in on something that will not occur again; and so, everyone goes home delighted at having seen a handful of society folk at the play, three motion picture stars, all the dramatic critics, and the latest recketeer with his cutie, to say nothing of the most notorious night-club hostess in all her glory.

The next day, in the cold gray dawn, they think it over and they are not so pleased. Nor are we sure that they have got their money's worth—particularly in these parlous times. They vow that they will never be duped again.

Like the Theaters

Yet the moment another musical comedy comes along, or the next big revue, there they are again, in practically the same seats. That is where the managers are astute. The dear old public loves to be bamboozled.

And now our publishers are doing practically the same thing.

A book is announced by a popular poetess. The book clubs have taken her up, so she must be worth while. Lecturers have talked from hundreds of platforms about her work before the women's clubs scattered all over the land. Like the sheep we are, we all fall into line. We whisper something to one another about Art, and how wonderful that it is still with us, in these unromantic times. After all, we say, there is something besides sordid business in this troubled world.

We take our authors, labeled and ticketed, as women take a Chanel gown. So-and-So is a Molyneux model, or this one came from Worth; so they must be good.

The trade edition of such a poetess' book sells for $2.50." It is a very slender volume, and that looks, at first glance, like a lot of money to expend for so tiny a book. But we must have it. We must prove that we are cultured.

But—there is to be a special first edition, signed by the poetess. Limited, too. Oh, very limited. It is so precious. And this will cost—hold your breath—only $15.

But in the years to come, we brood, it will be worth ten, maybe fifteen times that amount. So isn't this a good investment? Particularly now that stocks have been going steadily down, and all our bonds are deteriorating in value, too. It's like diamonds. They're always something upon which we can realize cash if we ever need it.

And so we fall for the de luxe edition, poor dears that we are. We don't even cut the precious leaves, for we have heard that this must not be done. Don't all the collectors tell us that?

Try to dispose of one of these volumes a few years hence. It will fetch you about one dollar.

Of course, such de luxe editions, if sold, pay the publishers royally for the first trade edition, no matter how large it is. Just as that opening performance at the theater pays for the whole first week's run.

A Charming Racket

But it is not only the poets who thus thrive. Any prose writer who has had any success can be used in like fashion by an alert publisher.

There lies before me an announcement that a new volume by a very popular novelist will be issued in the Autumn. But it appears in a limited edition of 500 copies, signed by the author, will be $12.

Now, five hundred copies of any book do not seem to me a very limited edition. Some writers are lucky if they sell that number in the course of a year. One would be surprised to discover how many novels fade away after a sale equivalent to that. But twelve times five hundred is a tidy sum; and you must remember that the author comes in for his share of such profits, so maybe one should rejoice that he is so favored in de luxe.

I bless any movement which gives a higher reward to the artist. Yes, and to the publishers, these days. For nothing is selling prodigiously.

The radio may have something to do with it. But we are now acquiring a strange and much-to-be-desired kind of reader—one who can listen in on the radio and at the same time read a book!

Truly, it is a wonderful age in which we live.

May heaven bless all theatrical producers and publishers in their clever manipulation of the stage and book markets. They deserve every added dollar they can draw in.

PURRING OF CAT NOW CAN BE MEASURED

By GOBIND BEHARI LAL
Universal Service Science Editor

New York, June 23—The purring of the Persian cat, the muttering of the refrigerator, the cracking of the thug's pistol, and other disturbing noises can be accurately measured now.

Some of these sleep and rest destroying noises could be better controlled through these measurements.

This assurance comes from K. A. Oplinger, West inghouse research department engineer of East Pittsburgh, Pa. He has devised an instrument for measuring noises to help noise abatement.

According to Oplinger

"The range covered by the device varies from the almost inaudible purr of a cat to the sharp staccato of a machine gun.

"The apparatus records all the important sound frequencies detected by the human ear. So it is expected to be available in the study of noises that disturb the daily life of the public."

One practical application is cited Refrigerator noises were registered, and through proper adjustments eliminated

The sound of any sort of machinery can be analyzed. The construction of the apparatus is comparatively simple. There are three small parts. One is a microphone. A case contains batteries. Then there is an amplifier with control dials. Three tubes are in the microphone and three in the amplifier.

79 ADMITTED TO FEDERAL BAR

On motion of U. S. Dist Atty Tarr, 79 lawyers, four of them women were sworn in as members of the federal bar today by Judge Morton.

In admitting the new members Judge Morton deplored the passing of the old customs in the law. He spoke against the commercialization of the profession.

Among the women admitted was Miss Anna R. Ettleman, Lynn and Beacon st., attorney, who three years ago was the only feminine attorney in Essex County admitted to the bar.

Miss Ettleman, an office associate of Miss Jennie Loitman Barron, former member of the Boston School committee is a graduate of the Boston University Law school. At one time she served as a member of the Boston Lodging Amendment.

Information regarding the contest may be obtained by addressing the Old South Association, Old South Meeting House, Milk and Washington sts.

Ruling to Cut Down Radio Interference

Washington, June 23 (U.S.)—An order reducing the permissible frequency deviation of radio stations from 500 to 50 cycles from assigned wave length was adopted by the federal radio commission today. It will become effective in one year.

This regulation is designed to reduce interference.

2 AIRMEN HELD IN RUM FLIGHT

Stamford, Ct., June 23 (AP)—Charles Rogers and Lucius H. Green, both of Freeport, L. I., today faced charges of transporting liquor in an airplane

They were arrested last night when they were forced to land on the outskirts of the city because of trouble with the oil pump Police found five cases of liquor in the craft.

WILKINS TELLS OF FIGHT TO SAVE SUB

eshell beneath her bulging blistered sides.

LINE SHORT OF MARK

Slowly and at some distance the Wyoming crept abreast of us. A ...in flashed, we saw a burst of ...moke, and a lifeline shot out from the side of the battleship, anarled in the air, and fell short of us.

Then another gun shot from a sailor's shoulder spat fire. This time a wavering line towed by the projectile swung high up and over our bow, bringing cheers from the ...ilors' throats.

Capt. Danenhower, Quartermaster Clark and Master Diver Crilley rushed for the line and held it fast, ...ruising as was their work on the ...ippery decks with waves dashing ...ver them.

As the Wyoming paid out her line the men on deck manned the rope, but few could have because the line was directly abeam and our deck is narrow. Not more than two men could exert their strength on the rope slowly, slowly it came home, every coil of the Nautilus giving us another grip. Then the line was cast off and we hauled foot by foot.

ALL HANDS TUGGING

All hands strained at the rope. With our motors dead we could not use the capstan and our deck was too confined for us to use the handspins in the old-fashioned sailor style. In fact, we have few old sailor methods or old time sailors aboard. Our men are skilled machinists and technicians.

We pulled and tugged. It was man-killing work. Our numbed fingers were torn by the new rope as we slipped and struggled for a firm footing on the narrow metal covered deck, our only safeguard from sure death in the mountainous seas a slender line slung from bridge to bow.

Reckless of personal safety as many of our men as possible hung far out over the line to exert their strength on the hawser. The life line groaned at the unaccustomed weight. Then in an unusually heavy surge it gave away, carrying two men with it.

Fortunately the heaving line held tight. For a moment the men's bodies swung in the air far over the side. They managed to hold fast until their comrades hauled them in. This brought another rousing cheer from the sailors aboard the battleship.

EVERYBODY DRENCHED

By this time we had been strenuously at work for three hours. Everybody had been drenched repeatedly.

Gradually the hawser neared our hull, but long before it was in night darkness fell, lending misery to our scene. Two powerful searchlights from the battleship were trained on our deck. The light they gave was extremely useful and almost essential for our safety.

At last there was the clang of metal upon metal. The iron shackle at the end of the towline had struck our bracing sides.

With everything secured to the best of our ability, Capt. Danenhower, Chief Officer Schlossbach and Crilley went forward in grave danger to secure things there. Crilley, heaving on the line when the ship lurched, went spinning over the side. He managed to hold on and was hauled aboard with a badly wrenched back.

With all made fast, everyone went below except a single deck watch. We were peeling off our sodden garments when a rattling on the conning tower attracted our attention. The deck watch shouted "All lines have parted."

BREAKS LOOSE AGAIN

Again we drifted out of control and helpless. Our five hours' work had been in vain.

The line clanging on the steel deck runs a risk are to be used for ice work, had been cut through. There was nothing to do but drift and toss in the beams of the searchlights. There seemed then to be our only hope of safety.

Tomorrow I shall continue the tale of our desperate battle to reach port. Meanwhile the crew is eager for their leave. The Nautilus rests in quiet waters, her launch ceaselessly at rest.

Graf Rendezvous With Nautilus at Pole Off

Friedrichshafen, Germany, June 23 (AP)—Abandoning its hope for a rendezvous with the submarine Nautilus at the North Pole, the Graf Zeppelin instead will make a six day cruise into Arctic regions next month on a scientific mission.

Dr. Hugo Eckener said the plan had suffered by Sir Hubert Wilkins' chartering the Nautilus and had eliminated the possibility of their meeting at the top of the world.

The giant dirigible will start off the latter part of July for the venture with nine scientists aboard including Prof. Rudolf Samoilowitch and Lieut. E. H. Smith, American. Whether passengers will be carried has not been decided.

MASS MEETING WILL INDORSE HEARST PLAN

A huge mass meeting will be held early in July on the Common to publicly endorse the William Randolph Hearst plan for a $5,000,000,000 "Prosperity Loan" for the relief of employment. Plans for the mammoth affair got under way at a meeting of the Suffolk County Servicemen at the Deacon Hall Building at 1051 Washington st. held last week.

William L. Anderson, secretary to Mayor Curley, who was the guest speaker, in addition to voicing his hearty approval of the Hearst plan, spoke on "The History of Our National Flag."

RELIEF URGED

Daniel Doherty, president of the Central Council of Irish County Clubs, Chairman Frank McGinnis of the Suffolk Servicemen, and Augustus Seaver, president of the Workingmen's Club, spoke on relief of unemployment.

At the close of the meeting the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas: The United States raised billions of dollars by means of government bond issues to send us to Europe to fight against the possible oppression of foreign dictation, and

Whereas: The United States raised billions of dollars by means of government bond issues to loan foreign countries so that they could keep their armies of wage earners fighting to save their countries from foreign oppression, therefore, be it

LOAN APPROVED

Resolved: That we, the members of the Suffolk County Service Men, an organization affiliated with the Workingmen's Club of Suffolk County, hereby approve the action of the Central Delegate Committee in endorsing the $5,000,000,000 "Prosperity Loan" bond issue by United States, proposed by the Hon. William Randolph Hearst, as a means of fighting the unemployment oppression being endured by hundreds of thousands of ex-servicemen and their families throughout the land, and it is further

Resolved: That we send a request to the Central Delegate Committee of The Workingmen's Club of Suffolk County to send letters to the United States Senators and Congressmen from Massachusetts asking them to inform our organization as to their attitude towards the $5,000,000,000 "Prosperity Loan."

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

Consider the Garden of Eden. When that old serpent put Eve up to the idea of handing Adam an apple, he may have been doing them both a good turn—for where would we be today, ladies and gentlemen, without our Adam's Apple. If we didn't have our Adam's Apple, we couldn't sing, we couldn't even speak. For your Adam's Apple is your larynx—your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. So—Consider your Adam's Apple. Be careful in your choice of cigarettes. Remember—the serpent in the smoker's Garden of Eden—harsh irritants are present in all raw tobaccos. Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants. Reach for a LUCKY instead. Remember, LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette in America that through its exclusive "TOASTING" Process expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants are sold to manufacturers of chemical compounds. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. And so we say, "Consider your Adam's Apple."

CHILD TRAINING---SHALL WE SPANK THE CHILDREN OR THEIR PARENTS?

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

IN A RECENT ARTICLE in The New Yorker, Josephine Dodge Daskam Bacon has been making mild but pointed fun of the psychologists, who with a stop-watch watch tiny children at play, and as a result draw up very vital statistics about babies' play habits, their sense of gregariousness and herd mindedness, their social instincts, their exhibitions of tolerance and anti-social prejudices and such like. The judgment of the learned ladies—for these are trained observers from Teachers' College—is that the babies act very much as babies might be expected to behave, not unlike little monkeys of the same age.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

And so Mrs. Bacon comes to the amused conclusion that the real problem in this country is not "the younger set," but "the sand-box set." They are the ones whose urges and self-expressions and inhibitions have to be watched, if the Republic is to be safe. Now Mrs. Bacon is no mean observer, herself. In the old days, some 30 years ago or so, before Freud was heard of and the Behaviorists had not yet begun to misbehave, she wrote a little collection of charming stories about naughty children. There was no parade of clinical observation in them, but the children were alive and natural and somehow believable. "The Madness of Philip" and "Ardelia in Arcady" and "The Memoirs of a Baby" are still well worth reading, particularly in the light of all the nonsense that is being written about children by spinsters with stop-watches and fixations on Dr. Watson. (Not Sherlock Holmes' dumb friend, but the gentleman who declares that a child's character is determined for life by the age of five.)

Children in the News

Little children seem to be getting into the news in startling and precocious ways. Mr. Mencken says somewhere that the production of "bad books" in the United States has grown in exact proportion to the attempts of busybodies to direct public attention to "bad books." Similarly, one might suspect that precocious children are numerous today in proportion to the attempts of the Teachers' College crowd to make us child-conscious and perhaps, even, to make the children themselves child-conscious. I suspect that the more you feed children intelligence tests and aptitude tests and the like, the more you are going to have them break out in queer ways, as if determined to show the stupid adults there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in Dr. Watson's philosophy.

I imagine that Metropolitan Boston laughed more than it disapproved at the stunt of the two seven-year-olds from Lynn, who took an automobile that wasn't working and, without ever having been taught to drive, steered the thing successfully through heavy Sunday traffic around Lynn and Revere for an hour or two before they were caught.

It almost looks as if the children of an automobile age are born with a kind of sixth sense which adults who grew up in a horse-and-buggy era will never possess. It was probably not entirely accidental that the little lad who was driving came through safely, where an adult at the wheel for the first time would probably have come to grief. It may be entirely possible that boys or girls in their teens are safer airplane pilots than adults who first got the hang of the thing in middle life.

Instead of trying to see how closely our little children resemble monkeys, the psychologists might well be turning their attention to seeing how unlike the 20th century child is like a monkey, and to determining what aptitudes he may have which his parents never possessed.

Spank Them First!

But before those boys are tested they ought first to be spanked! Or, perhaps better still, their parents ought to be spanked. Until we find out definitely that the children of a new age are safer to be trusted with machines than adults are, the old rules ought to be enforced. We see altogether too many boys and girls under 16 driving about, skillful enough probably, but certainly not judgmatic enough to be allowed on the crowded highways. Last summer two boys scooting around bathing beaches in speed-boats killed or injured bathers before they could be caught and calmed down. The child wonder in a stolen airplane is still to come, but somewhere he is probably looking forward to the feat as soon as he graduates from shorts into knickers.

The children have got to be punished, I suppose, whereas every notion of justice and common sense calls for the parents to be made uncomfortable. Last summer we made a lot of youngsters pretty self-conscious and uppity over the publicity attending their tree-sitting activities. If the publicity had been quietly cut off at the source, and the parents fined and put on probation as public nuisances, that particular epidemic of silly behavior would have died a-borning.

More and more it becomes obvious that it is the parents whom the psychologists ought to get after. Parents who are too occupied with running about to know what their little ones are doing, parents who are too lazy, parents with notions about the child's right to self-expression, culled from the women's magazines. Particularly and especially that woman in a Southern town, the wife of a naval officer on sea service, who brought her four-year-old son to the town jail and had him locked up for the night because she couldn't control him. Later, apparently, she was much incensed because the head of the police said some very pertinent things about a common jail not being a nursery or a reformatory for little children. She felt that the officer was being old-fashioned and ignorant and behind the times.

This mother's child, she said, was always wanting to run away to places and do things. Our guess is that as soon as he can manage it he WILL run away, once and for all. And probably he will be better off than he would be at home with the sort of a mother who admits that she has failed at her job and who, like most of the young parents of her breed, takes it for granted that she can turn the job over to society while she amuses herself.

SHE HAD FEARED FATE OF VERNA RUSSELL

Winifred Flynn Said to Have Gone Riding Sunday With One the Police Want

The death of pretty Winifred Flynn, 20-year-old nurse, of 2 University rd., Cambridge, became steeped in mystery today as police sought a motive for her suicide Sunday.

Except for a statement that she feared the same fate as that which befell Verna Russell, Fall River nurse, for whose alleged murder Elliott R. Hathaway is on trial, Miss Flynn had no apparent reason for leaping to her death in the Charles river from Lars Anderson bridge.

Search for a man with whom the girl is said to have gone riding at 7 a. m. Sunday, despite the fact that her woman employer said she had left the girl only 15 minutes before the death leap, was begun today by Cambridge police.

WOMAN EMPLOYER.

This woman is Mrs. Steven V. Gilligan of Oakley rd., Watertown, who told police she had left the girl at University rd. Sunday morning.

At the Gilligan home a neighbor was taking care of the children today and said Mr. and Mrs. Gilligan had left their home early.

Miss Ann R. Dwyer, the suicide's landlady, said that the "Verna Russell" remark by Miss Flynn was made about ten days ago in the course of casual conversation, and was not enlarged upon.

The landlady said the girl had not referred to Verna Russell at any time after that.

"I know of no reason," said Miss Dwyer, "why she should want to commit suicide, and so far as I know she was on pleasant terms with everyone."

MYSTERY TO AUNT

Mrs. James J. Eagan of 204 Calumet st., Roxbury, an aunt of the girl and her only known relative in America, said today that she, too, could think of no reason for suicide.

"I have seen Winifred often since she came here from Ireland five years ago," said Mrs. Eagan, "and her taking her life is a mystery to me.

"I know of no reason whatever why she should have done such a thing."

The aunt refused to disclose funeral plans for the girl.

A former employer of the girl, Sydney G. Vickers of Alden st., Newton Center, State st. broker, said she had worked in his family three or four years ago, but that he remembers her only dimly.

Police believe that when they have found the man with whom she is said to have gone riding, they may learn a motive for the suicide.

Ex-Harvard Star Found Not Guilty

Joseph C. Cunningham, 24, of Canton st., Milton, former Harvard football star, charged in the Waltham district court today with drunkenness and driving while under the influence of liquor, was found not guilty of the first charge. The second was set for hearing on June 29 in order to permit Cunningham to produce witnesses.

Benjamin Ticknor, Harvard football star, marshal of the 1931 class, with two young women, was a passenger in the car when Cunningham was arrested on Main st., Waltham, on June 12, testified for Cunningham.

DAILY TRUE STORY

THE ROAD TO FAME

EDDIE ADMITTED SHE SHOULD PLAY HEROINE

IT WASN'T for lack of trying that Elsie Carstairs hadn't kept her place in the new comedy that all wise ones on Broadway predicted would take the town by storm.

Eddie Malvern, of Malvern Bros., the producers, admitted to her that she ought to play the heroine. He shrugged his shoulders while he said it: "You know there's always a but," he added, when he let her out after a few rehearsals.

Whatever the "but" was, Elsie was out. The worst of it was she needed the part. She was about flat broke and to be flat broke in New York is not a delight.

Tom Dearborn, who wrote publicity for the Malverns, sympathized with her—Elsie had done him a good turn once when he needed extra money for a sick child.

"You ought to have this part," he asserted during an informal call, "the dame that's got it has a nail—you know that Jess Rodman's putting up the dough for the play—well, draw your own conclusions. I'm sorry, but maybe there'll be a way out—you never can tell."

Elsie thanked him. "Keep up a stiff front," said Tom, "and don't let 'em see you're disappointed; anyway, you should worry with all the jewels you've got—I guess the wolf's a long way from your door."

Tom Looked Around
Met Her Sad Smile

He glanced around the small apartment, quietly but richly furnished, but when his eyes met Elsie's again he noticed the sad little smile on her lips.

"Listen, Tom," she said, " I wouldn't say it to anyone else, but those jewels are—well they might sell for $100 by the lot."

"You don't say," gasped Tom, "honest to goodness, I thought they were real!"

"No, you didn't," she cried, "how could you?"

Tom flushed. "Well you know how it is—"

"Not with me, Tom—not yet and never, I hope—not that those gee-gaws haven't been useful—you know what a big front means on Broadway."

Tom shook her hand. "Cheer up," he said, "tomorrow's another day after all."

After he left, Elsie sat by the window staring out at the lights of the city—the city to which she had come five years before with the laurels of a stock company fresh on her brow. And she hadn't done badly; she'd received nice notices; managers had been kind to her; really she didn't complain that the world had treated her any but fairly, but still for a big chance hadn't come.

Somehow, she felt it was starting at her in the part of the comedy which she had thought she was going to pay only to find that she had been supplanted.

But there was nothing to do about it and as Tom said, tomorrow was another day.

She undressed and went to bed. It must have been in the small hours that she was awakened by a gruff voice close to the side of her bed. "Get up, lady!" The words emanated from lips that were almost covered by the black mask that concealed the face.

Elsie got up. "Give me them jewels, and if you scream . . ."

Clutching her pajamas, Elsie pointed to the writing table in which reposed her collection of phoney gems.

The thief seized them avidly, forced his victim into a chair, bound her securely and slipped away.

The whole affair was over in a few minutes. Apart from the indignity of being trussed up it made a rather laughable incident. Elsie tried to picture the thief's countenance when he escaped to sell the loot—she got a laugh out of that.

The fact that she had been robbed was bruited about quickly enough when she was discovered by the maid who came to do her morning work.

The early editions carried it, together with the story of the robbery.

In the office of Eddie Malvern, Jess Rodman was walking back and forth. "And not only that," Malvern was saying, "not only, as I told you, would Elsie be a hit in the part, but look at this robbery—and see what she says." He held up the paper: "I don't want any publicity, and, as for those jewels they're gone. They weren't insured and that's my hard luck. No, I won't set a value on them because you wouldn't believe me. Why cry over spilled milk?"

"That girl's got class," said Malvern, "and she's got exclusive dope on the part, just as I told you from the first—and now along comes this robbery and we get publicity you couldn't buy handed us on a gold platter. All you've got to do is let me put her in the part Fanny's got. Good lord, man, you can fix it with Fanny, and, honest to God, she'll wreck the show."

He Called Elsie
And Invited Her Down

"Oh, hell," said Rodman, "sure I can fix it up; believe me, she's got no strings on me—just did it to be obliging, that's all."

Eddie touched the bell. "Get Miss Carstairs on the phone," he said to the boy.

Then he turned to Rodman.

"Here, you take this other phone. Hello, Elsie," said Malvern. "How you feeling, kinder cold with all your jewels stolen?"

"Is that so? Well how'd you like to come down and see me right away? Mr. Rodman will be here too."

Tomorrow had turned into today, and it was as Tom said, another day, for by evening Elsie had signed for the part she coveted. Rodman had promised Fanny a trip to Europe and all the wise ones were saying that Elsie must have a multi-millionaire sugar daddy got to turn a hair at the loss of jewels such as she had.

But it wasn't until after the first night that Tom ventured to call on the new star. She grasped his hand fervently. "I knew you'd do it," said Tom.

"All due to you, Tom," she smiled, "perhaps I know more than I tell."

Tom grinned. "Say," he said, "you did me a good turn once and one good turn deserves another. Just between ourselves though, you were wrong about those jewels being worth as much as $10,"

Fire Drives Out 50 in Back Bay

Fifty aged men and women were driven to the street early today when fire, originating in the basement of Harold Hoffman Art Stores, Inc., sent volumes of smoke through the Massachusetts Chambers, a five-story brick apartment block at 146 Massachusetts ave., Back Bay.

Patrolman Joseph Kiley, shortly before 3 o'clock, saw smoke emerging from the cellar of the Hoffman store, sent in an alarm and then rushed into the Massachusetts Chambers where, with George Harding, the janitor, he aroused rooms and guests.

Although many refused to leave their apartments, some 30 men and women attired in night clothing rushed to the street when smoke began to seep into the apartment block.

Those who did not leave the smoke-filled building hurriedly dressed and were prepared to leave at a moment's notice. Ladders were ordered placed against the building by fire officials. The firemen confined the blaze to the art store.

COURT LETS HER HAVE HIM FOR TWO MONTHS

Husband Agrees and Will Pay $200 a Month in Addition to Alimony

Mrs. Thelma Hall Herrick, Boston society woman who divorced her husband, Robert Herrick, Jr., in Paris, in 1927, was granted the custody of her son, Robert Herrick, 3rd., aged 9 years, for the Summer, as a result of a mutual agreement made in Suffolk Probate court today.

Judge Frost permitted the mother to care for the boy during the months of July and August, pending a hearing in September on Mrs. Herrick's petitions for a definite ruling in the matter of custody. Mr. Herrick agreed to pay $200 a month to his former wife for the support of their son, in addition to the alimony which he is paying.

Mr. and Mrs. Herrick were in court, but the child was not. Mrs. Herrick has been waging her fight for custody ever since the Civil tribunal of the Seine granted her a divorce from Herrick, a wealthy Boston broker. Under the Paris decree Herrick was given custody of their son on the ground he was better able financially to educate the boy.

Later the parties agreed through their counsel for the mother and father each to have the boy six months at a time. Mrs. Herrick in her petition claims Herrick lived up to this agreement until last year.

Aiwill announced the 11 couples represented a record number for marriage intentions in Lynn.

FAITHFULL TIPS WIN PRIZES

Exclusive pictures of Starr Faithfull, former Beacon Hill beauty, and valuable information on various angles of her mysterious death, captured the first three prizes last week in the Evening American's News Tips contest.

One contestant, who furnished pictures of the slain girl, which helped the American to maintain its lead in the story over competitors, received the $15 first prize. The name must be withheld.

Another anonymous contributor brought to the Evening American information of the case which won the second prize of $10.

Other information, from a third informant, who asked that the name be withheld, was adjudged worthy of the $5 third prize.

There were many others whose tips were no less accurate and valuable to the American's consistent leadership in the newspaper field. However, the Starr Faithfull case so far overshadowed any other developments in the week's news that many worthy of "top-flight" classification in other weeks were reluctantly relegated to lower positions.

Ten of those whose initiative won $2 prizes follow:

Joseph Diamond, 32 Oak st., Wellesley. Story on man killed by train in Wellesley.

PALO ALTO (Cal)—The Palo Alto Board of Censors has ruled that pictures showing college boys drinking liquor and flirting must not be shown in such close proximity to Stanford University.

But nobody's education is complete until he has learned from experience to keep away from movies showing college boys drinking liquor and flirting.

TIPS FOR WOMEN—WHEN SHE CEASES BEING "A GIRL"

By HELEN ROWLAND

A WOMAN is still "a girl," until she begins wearing "out-sizes" and comfortable shoes, and stops wondering what color to dye her hair, each season.

The average man spends a few years inventing alibis for staying single—and the rest of his life explaining why he married.

A man's winter loves, like his winter hat, may be carried over from year to year; but his summer love, like his bathing suit, is just a one-season affair, and is usually faded and going to pieces before that is half over.

Why does a bachelor always feel SO sorry for a spinster, just because she hasn't got somebody as selfish and bad-tempered as he is, to coddle, pick up after and wait up for nights?

There is nothing really morally wrong about these backsacks and skin-tight bathing-suits on the beach; they are just aesthetically sinful.

A little applesauce, like a little liquor, may stimulate a man's love; but feeding him too much merely gives him indigestion of the vanity and makes him wonder why he should waste all his charms on a simple little thing like you.

The most useful book to give a bride is not a cookbook, but a book of philosophy.

In the average man's nature, there is somewhere an odd perverse streak, which makes him prefer a little bit of the wrong woman's love to all the right woman's devotion.

Somehow, a woman's mental charms never seem to out weight a hundred-and-seventy-five pounds avoirdupois.

'PETTING' NOT BEST POLICY, SAYS MISS FAIRFAX

Pays to Be Good, Girl Writes

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

PERHAPS you girls may get a little bored with me sometimes when I tell you that petting is not the best policy, if you're looking for plain gold rings and a home of your own. But here's a letter in answer to a girl who wrote me a little while ago and signed herself Lonesome. She said she didn't know whether it was because she didn't indulge in petting or because she wore glasses that she didn't have a good time. Half a dozen girls who wear glasses have answered her letter and say they're sure it's not the glasses. Here's one of the letters

Dear Lonesome: While reading your letter to Miss Fairfax the other evening I couldn't help comparing your life with mine. I am also 19 and do not like to pet. I often wondered if it paid to be good. But it does. I too wear glasses, am short, and I guess not beautiful, but I could be worse. Very often I'd try to figure out how some girls had so many boy friends but after I watched them awhile, I discovered the boys weren't what they were supposed to be, or the girls had to put up with a good deal

Many's the time I felt blue because some handsome boy ignored me. But let me tell you a little secret, personality and cheer speak for themselves. I have many acquaintences but the few real friends are loyal and can always be depended upon. Well, my reward is this—a real man. He's a decent and well educated chap, and thinks the world of me

Where would I be now, if I had petted? I'm not sorry, I'm near the seventh heaven

SUNSHINE

Would Make Impression

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have met a most wonderful young man who is the son of the senior partner of the firm I work for. He has had me out to dinner several times, and now I have an invitation to visit his mother at their summer cottage about the middle of next month. I do want to make a good impression on her and have the right clothes, and I do know what is right—but I am terribly poor. Do you think it would be awful for me to make the clothes I would wear there? I have been learning to sew. WINIFRED.

Dear Winifred: Indeed I think that if you did make your own pretty summer dresses you would make a much greater impression than you can imagine. Mothers approve of thrifty girls, more than they used to these days. But you must be sure that your cloths are well cut and of the right materials. This is to be a "cotton" year. I should suggest those lovely embroidered organdies for evening—a white and one or two in pastel shades. For informal wear, linen and cotton print tennis dresses and, if you can afford it, one lovely flowered chiffon. Of course, you will have to have a bathing suit, and that too may be made at home. My best wishes to you for a happy vacation.

Wants His Pin Back

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

About two years ago a young man that I knew well gave me his high school graduation pin to wear. At that time we went quite a bit to each other, but lately we have drifted apart completely. Now he has asked to a few of my friends and tells them that he would like to have his pin back. I am willing to do so, not on speaking terms he does not want to call me and ask for it.

Shall I send the pin to him without his asking me for it, or should I wait until he calls or sees me and asks for it himself?

WONDERING BEE

Dear Wondering Bee: I believe under the circumstances I'd send back the pin. Unless he's done something unspeakable you might smile the next time you see him and say, "I believe you'd like to have your pin again, wouldn't you?"

COMPLETE BEACH ATTIRE

Vest and Dress Over Trunks

SKETCHED IN PARIS

The bathing suit in the sketch comes from Mary Nowitzky's beach collection. Over trunks of turquoise blue jersey are a long vest and little dress of jersey in a becoming shade of heliotrope. The note of turquoise is echoed in a knot of that color, which serves to fasten the dress in front. The dress may be slipped off for swimming as the vest is belted and reaches nearly to the edge of the trunks.

'The Years Slipped Off Like an Outgrown Coat'

By WINIFRED BLACK

THE QUEER little cafe was crowded to the very doorsteps.

Winifred Black was laughing

Travelers, from all over the world, hometown boys in college caps and queer little embroidered woolen coats Hometown girls, with their fair hair in braids, a comfortable elderly couple or so, and two or three pairs of honeymooners

Everybody was eating and drinking and almost everybody and talking.

At one end of the room sat a man with a broad, red face and a grin as wide as the famous grin of the famous Nut Cracker of Nuremburg.

The man had a zither on the table before him, and on the zither he played wistful little airs from the Tyrol.

Then suddenly he opened his mouth and began to sing.

A gay song it was, with a rousing chorus. And when he came to the chorus every one in the low ceilinged, ancient room sang with him.

Old and young men and women. Those who could not sing whistled and those who could neither whistle nor sing, hammered on the table and nodded their heads in time to the music.

It was great fun.

The years slipped off like an outgrown coat and youth laughed again, on the door-step

Gay youth, bold youth, carefree youth, wreckless youth, sweet hopeful, credulous, delicious youth —I wonder if the reason we love it so, is because it never stays

And then the broad-faced man raised his broad hands in a gesture of silence, he opened his mouth and sang not jovially this time.

No roaring chorus, now

No half-jesting ballad about the heart that was lost in Heidelberg and never could be found again.

The Fraulein Gretchen, who had lilted across the continent with us was gone, and in place of it was a quiet song with a haunting refrain

The song was about an old couple sitting by the fire in the twilight of years and the old man took his old sweetheart's hand in his and sang:

"Oh Youth, where have you gone."

But the next verse ended differently:

"Oh Age, where are you?" sang the old man, and the old wife laid her hand upon her old husband's shoulder, and they looked into the red coals together, and heard the twittering of the swallows in the eaves of their cottage, and were very happy.

And the crowded old world cafe was as still as twilight on a mountain top.

Tears stood in the eyes of those who listened to the quaint old song.

And I understood why they came every night to hear the broad-faced man play his zither and sing.

It was all very gay at first, but after all—isn't it strange it is those who make us cry a little that we love best—we who try to pretend to be so knowing and so worldly wise?

Styles Seen on Beaches Abroad

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, June 23—The bathing suits that are in the swim this year are extremely good looking, and some of them are quite elaborate, too. Of course, the simple suit of hand-knitted silk jersey is always sure of representation on the smartest figures and at the leading coast resorts, but this year there are several new and intriguing versions of what used to be probably the ugliest garment in the world, the bathing suit.

Some of the new models are designed to add color to any beach, offer interesting color contrasts and combinations of stripes and lines are not so much in demand as they were last year. But with very few exceptions the style of the bathing suit is the same—like after a season's home in an indoor swimming pool as in the surf. There's no doubt about it, this year Parisiennes are riding the crest of the wave of smartness and whether or not with the practical idea in mind the major theme of most of this summer's sport things

Use Knife and Fork When Possible

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN

A few of us have had quite a warm argument as to whether it is proper or improper to eat chicken without a fork. That is, is it proper to eat it holding it in your hands or fingers? It is at a dinner, where do they serve a chicken leg with a wrapping of paper, as though it were to be eaten with the fingers" Has the rule changed lately; that is, in the last year?

JOHN.

No, sir, the rule hasn't changed a bit. Careful eaters never take in their fingers food that can be eaten with a knife and fork. And the reason is obvious, if you have watched a person opposite you eating a chicken bone or anything else with the fingers The fact that there is a paper collar on the leg of the chicken or on a chop has nothing to do with a suggestion that we hold either by the paper collar. The collar is sometimes placed on the piece of chicken or on the chop to conceal the end of the bone.

If It Is the "Expected Thing"

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A couple were married last week. I did not receive an invitation to the wedding, as I am not acquainted with the bride, and I've met the groom only a few times. When they return from the honeymoon they will be given a reception. The sister of the groom has invited me to the reception. Should I accept, and if so, do you agree with me that I should give a gift? My mother says that I shouldn't go if I cannot give them a gift. The reception will be at a hall

GIRL READER.

If the groom's sister is the hostess of the reception, issues the invitations, there is no reason why you should not accept. And I see no reason either why you should take a present to the party. Of course, if you find out that this is the expected thing to do, there's advice given to take a gift, but, since you were not invited to the wedding, a wedding gift is not taken for granted or, I should think, expected at a post-wedding reception.

STRAWBERRY IN JELLY AND JAM

By MARTHA LEE

IF YOURE living up to your good resolution of putting up plenty of jams and jellies this year as protection against next winter's rainy days on the cupboard you are, of course, going to put up at least a few pots of strawberry jam and conserve.

Martha Lee

Here are the recipes that I hope you'll use. You'll not find each one of them calls for pectin which many wise housekeepers use, especially with strawberry jam and jellies, to make the work out of the ordinary. If you'll follow the directions exactly, I know you'll have a bit of trouble.

SLICED STRAWBERRY JAM

1½ cups (3 lbs.) prepared fruit
7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar
1 cup bottled pectin

Wash and hull 2 quarts fully ripe berries. Cut halves lengthwise; large berries in quarters. Measure sugar and prepared fruit into large kettle; mix well, and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute. Remove from fire and stir in pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 5 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Quickly pour into glasses. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 10 eight-ounce glasses.

PINEAPPLE, STRAWBERRY, AND ORANGE JAM

1 cup (½ lb.) crushed strawberries
2 cups (1 lb.) crushed pineapple
1 cup orange juice
Grated rind 3 oranges, if desired
7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar
½ cup bottled pectin

Wash, hull, crush or grind about 1 quart fully ripe berries. Each berry must be reduced to a pulp. Cut fine or grind 1 medium fully ripe orange and use 1 No. 2 can crushed pineapple. Prepare juice of 3 oranges and, if desired, grated rind. Measure sugar, prepared fruit, orange juice and rind into large kettle; mix well, and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute. Remove from fire and stir in pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 5 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Quickly pour into glasses. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 10 eight-ounce glasses.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

A Salad a Day

PEAR SALAD

1½ cupfuls grated American cheese
6 canned pear halves
Mayonnaise
Lettuce

Arrange the pear halves individually on nests of lettuce leaves, fill the hollows of the pears with the grated cheese, and top with mayonnaise. Fresh pears can be used if they are very ripe. In this case, sprinkle them with lemon juice and a tiny bit of sugar, cover, and let stand 15 minutes before using.

Household Hints

MOXIE FOR the nerves—Nervous people will find that one glass of Moxie taken at bedtime will soothe the nerves and induce a restful sleep. This health hint was a former prescription by a doctor and has been followed with good results.

To Set Colors in Wash Goods—2 tbsps. salt, 1 tbsp. of ammonia, 1 tbsp. of turpentine, 1 pail warm water. New wash goods dipped into the above and dried without rinsing, will not fade. Goods which are soiled must first be washed and rinsed, or the mixture will set dirt as well as the color.—Mrs. Emma A. Horbiltt 247 Washington st., Dorchester

Answer to Requests

A READER recently asked for directions to prevent cream soups and chowders from curdling. Here's what Mrs. K. Camille Den Dooven writes her:

Cream soups and chowders curdle through reaction of the acid existing in fruits, fish or vegetables, when combined with lactic-acid existing in the milk, when heated to certain temperature.

To overcome this reaction, a reacting agent is necessary. There are a few of these agents existing, but the most practical one is Bicarbonate of soda (baking soda). To bind soups, let us take on the basis of 6 quarts soup.

Take 6 oz. butter (¼ cup) and melt this in a pan. Add 1 cup flour (6 ozs.) and cook this thoroughly, stirring all the time. Then add gradually your soup. If too thick, add more soup, strain thoroughly, and let simmer for a few minutes, then place on steam table to serve.

'Chlorosis' a Form of Anemia

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

LACK OF proper exercise and fresh air often results in an anemic condition called "chlorosis." This form of anemia is found only in young girls.

Dr. Copeland

The disease is common among poorly fed and overworked girls. The girls who are confined all day in close badly lighted rooms are frequent sufferers. Cases of chlorosis sometimes occur where the living conditions are favorable. It is seldom seen in country-bred girls, who enjoy the benefits of fresh air and sunlight.

Marked emotional and nervous disorders help to bring about this condition. As a rule, however, failure of nutrition and the wrong manner of living are the most important causes.

A person suffering from chlorosis looks anemic. The complexion is peculiar having a curious yellow green tinge. On this account the case is often spoken of as the "green sickness."

Breathless and palpitation of the heart are frequent symptoms. There is usually a tendency toward fainting. The face and ankles may become swollen.

There is a marked change in the disposition. The affected persons become low-spirited, irritable and sensitive. Frequently such conditions are ignored and underestimated, I am sorry to say.

As a rule, the treatment of this condition is simple and effective. Rest, plenty of fresh air and sunlight are most essential. A carefully planned nutrition diet is important. It should consist of wholesome and easily digested food.

Care in the bowels is important. If constipation is present it is best to give a saline purge each morning

In very severe cases rest in bed is imperative. The condition is a temporary one and responds quickly to treatment.

FIRST DIVIDEND NEWS OF WEEK PROVES GOOD

By FRANK H. MELOON

Before President Hoover's announcement of his plan for a year's suspension of war debts and reparations payments, the bears were telling me that this week would see numerous important dividends actually declared. They did not hesitate to forecast that there would be a good year declared its regular dividend. The action was in line with what one might reasonably have expected from what Mr. Litchfield had to say on his recent visit to Boston.

President Litchfield states today: "Renewal sales of tires the last three months have been running 10 per cent to 15 per cent ahead of last year. Original equipment sales, however, have shown a decline in line with automobile manufacturing."

The company's general forecast, he states, is that renewal sales will continue in good volume, with results for the year showing an increase over last year.

Days of the so-called "Coolidge bull market are vividly recalled by the action of stocks in the past two sessions. Recalling a famous advertisement, "they laughed when he (Hoover) said on them to buy," but the terrorizing composition made Wall Street wildly enthusiastic. The rises in commodity prices have given special cheer.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Cautionary advices sent out by numerous brokerage house letter writers today were followed by a quiet wave of profit-taking in industrial rails, but the market grew dull when it was found little stock was offered. In the rally that followed the rail group performed least ably. Later setbacks were moderate.

American Telephone today soon recovered the early 2 point loss when the word went around that the company this year is earning better than it did last year.

Good Advance Is for First National

One of the best of today's advances was scored by First National Stores, when it rapidly moved up about 4 points to a new high.

Consolidated Gas Is Acting Well

Strength and activity in Consolidated Gas today was partly instrumental in improving market feeling after the recessional opening.

Today's rallies, coming on top of the spectacular advances of the last three days, convinced Wall Street that investment confidence in security values had largely increased since the middle of the week.

Union Carbide Gains Likely

Earnings for Union Carbide for second quarter will not come up to the 61 cents a share reported for the first six months. However, the 3 are becoming convinced that there are signs of improvement in the chemical industry and that it may result in a better trend of revenues for the company during the last five months of the year. Some traders were pressing the stock recently and this resulted in increasing the outstanding short interest.

Manhattan Railway Bonds Attractive

One of the attractive speculative issues today was the 4s of 1990 of Manhattan Railway 4 per cent lease of 1990, according to dealers from some quarters. These bonds would be disturbed in the reorganization because of the transit unification, and would be an underlying issue in the new company to be paid off eventually. At recent selling prices around 60 the return has been nearly 6% per cent.

Despite the fact that the last balance sheet of United States Industrial Alcohol disclosed a rather poor showing, reports were current that directors of the company might omit the quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share at their meeting later in the week.

Directors Prompted to Conserve Cash

In this respect, it was pointed out that the unsettled conditions prevailing in the alcohol industry might prompt directors to conserve cash. Earnings of the company thus far in the current year are running below dividend requirements and contracts made at prevailing low prices do not indicate much chance of an important immediate pickup in earnings.

'Long Pull' Buying Evident in U. G. I.

"Long pull" investment buying continues to manifest itself in United Gas Improvement on reactions. Proof of this buying is traced to interests conversant with the affairs of the company and is based on the belief that the present low prices for which earnings are adding up

Current Earnings Around 1930 Level

Current earnings are running at approximately the same rate as a year ago, and interests close to the company anticipate a slight improvement later in the year. In addition, "long pull" buying also is encouraged by knowledge that the company will benefit from the electrification program undertaken by railroads in its territory.

BOSTON COPPER SHARES ARE HIGHER

Stimulated by an advance in copper metal to 8¼ cents Copper shares on the Boston Stock Exchange enjoyed the most active session in many months today. Volume of trading was heavy with St. Mary's Mineral Land in the lead with a gain of nearly 2 points. Utah Copper was over a point higher and Calumet & Hecla, Granby and Old Dominion were all above previous closing prices.

First National Stores was an active leader recording a gain of nearly 2 points on the local board and a gain of nearly 4 points on the New York Exchange. The shares were at a new high for the year.

Spencer Trask was over 3 points higher, and Sullivan Machine added a point. General Electric moved up over 2 points. Pacific Mills gained 1¼ and Amoskeag was second in dull trading.

Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred jumped 2 points, while prior preferred was up 1 point. Pennsylvania Electric preferred lowered 1¼, Stone & Webster was down 1¼ and New England Telephone eased a point. Pennsylvania Railroad dipped 1¼ and American Telephone was off a fraction. Commercial Credit issues each showed fractional recessions.

STATE STREET SIDELIGHTS

Some State St. brokers, after giving careful consideration to the possible effects of a moratorium, are pretty well convinced any step in this direction in itself has little stock market value. It does, however, feel that the presidential remarks are likely to change the psychology of the world at large which may be of real benefit to business, which sooner or later diverts share prices.

Examination of the rally reveals a wide difference of opinion as to its character. Some of the bullish side are those who say covering by shorts is mainly responsible, while others feel that the real investment purchasing has taken place. The safest course is a middle one and certain reasons favor a mixture of the two.

Since the technical position is of importance and most traders are inclined to think it has been somewhat weakened in recent sessions it is not surprising that they are looking for a setback. It is their idea that a large part of the short interest has been removed and a long following substituted that may attract an attempt to unsettle them by the bears.

It is not hard to believe the bear party will be anxious to return to action. They contend that sooner or later the market will have to consider second-quarter reports, plus the usual trend of car loadings and reports from the automobile centers, which they feel will call for at least a normal setback.

Their opposition will come from the very finest bull sources. The bankers are expected to furnish support in the event of losses to making too much progress, not only because they think any further break would hurt sentiment but because they are anxious to have a strong structure at the time they are preparing their semi-annual reports.

United States Steel moved up from its low price of 93¼ and closed at 96¼, down 2 points net. And American Can was down 1⅝ at 107¼. Auburn Auto finished the session at 169, down 8½ points.

Anaconda Copper was up ½, at 37. International Tel & Tel down 2⅛ at 83. Radio down ¾ at 11¾. Standard Oil of New Jersey down ⅜ at 42. Standard of New York up ⅛ at 36. And Houston Oil up 3 points, at 41.

SALES SLOW UP

Estimates that steel production had increased 4 points materially in the last week seemed to have a bearish influence in the late trading.

The volume was substantially reduced as compared with yesterday, sales approximating 2,500,000 shares against 4,600,000 on Monday.

The day in stocks began here with declines of a point or two, despite further strength in London and Berlin. The market rallies for a time in the morning, but turned heavy after midday.

With the aggressive steps already taken, Wall Street views are still decidedly optimistic over the prospect of war debt relief, although delay on the part of the French in announcing their decision added a note of uncertainty, and it was pointed out that approval by the next Congress before the Dec. 15 payments are due assumes that there will be no protracted disagreement over reorganization.

SEES SETTLING DOWN

On the whole, the action of the stock market was as long expected, a settling down to a narrow trading range for a time, pending quarterly dividend and earnings announcements.

There are several important dividend meetings this week and next, including Westinghouse Electric, Baltimore & Ohio Delaware & Hudson and Pennsylvania Railroad.

The vitalizing effects of the war debt project have been most notable in the copper industry. After selling today's export price of 5.00 cents per pounds, the price was marked up today from 8 to 8½ cents as the demand continued in good volume. The price of copper however is still far below what the industry regards as profitable.

Lead and zinc prices also firmed.

The action of the International Commerce Commission in asking the railroads to file particulars as to their proposals for a revision of freight rates was unexpected in that glance as threatening considerable delay in granting relief.

Chairman J. Polley of the general committee dispelled anxiety on this score, explaining that this action had been expected and the railroads would probably be fixed within 15 days.

Loans, credit conditions were a little easier, with some call money offered at 1 per cent outside, while the official rate held at 1½.

N. E. LEADS IN BUSINESS PICKUP

Washington, June 23. The United States Employment Service, a division of the Department of Labor, issued its first encouraging statement [illegible] when it reported [illegible] part [illegible] and the South.

"An analysis of the reports received by the Employment Service," the statement says, "indicates increasing employment in all outdoor activities."

PUBLIC WORKS BOOM

There was an expansion in road construction in practically every section of the country. Numbers of [illegible] unemployed miners, who were unemployed most of the winter, have been absorbed and are busy [illegible] of steady employment [illegible] up late fall.

"Heavy construction work, such as hydro-electric development projects, dams, tunnels, and a large influence of natural gas pipeline installations, provided employment for many additional men, including highly trained artisans.

"Spring agricultural work was at its peak.

STEEL HIRES MEN

"Better scheduling prevailed in the food and shoe industry, especially in the New England district, where spring manufacture of these factories worked with increased forces.

"An encouraging feature of the industrial activity of the month was the upward trend in both production and employment in certain branches of the textile industry.

"The shipbuilding industry kept large forces of men employed and additional skilled shipfitters were employed in a number of the yards along the Atlantic coast.

CREDIT MEN ARE OPTIMISTIC

The time for [illegible] arrived, 1,200 members of the Credit Association and Credit Men's [illegible] their 36th annual convention at the Hotel Statler were told today by Dr. Stephen M. Miller, executive manager of the association.

"Optimism now is particularly opportune at a time when the nation is fortified with a volume of elastic credit and at a period when personal and business liquidations have run their course," he said.

Dr. Miller expressed the opinion that perhaps there is a great deal of eliminating waste, and flayed trade prophets, including college professors of economics, for vivid predictions.

America will come out of the depression a stronger and more virile nation of business men, President William S. Muller of the Boston Credit Association told the gathering, adding:

"How we consider the enviable position of the United States among nations—that with a large proportion of the world's gold supply, its 120,000,000 people, self-contained and yet exporting but 10 per cent of its products—the present state of mind of our people is certainly unworthy of the traditions of our American business men.

"Our next step forward in what we may term our American culture will come through the wonderful revelations of our scientists and the accomplishments of our engineers, not in the products of their genius alone, but in the conservation of time.

FRANK REILLY TAKES BRIDE

Frank Reilly, City Hall reporter for the Boston Evening American and the Boston Post, secretary and Miss Adele Morris of 81 Wash[illegible] Dorchester, were married [illegible] morning in Mount Carmel [illegible] Dorchester.

The ceremony was performed by [illegible] Assistant Curate [illegible] the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Murphy, was attended by Miss Cecilia M. Collins, a classmate at St. Peter and Paul school, Dorchester. The best man was John J. Reilly, brother of the bridegroom.

The couple will take a honeymoon auto tour. Mrs. Reilly is a member of the Notre Dame Alumni Association, and her husband is a graduate of Boston College High School.

AHOY, MATEY!

He was one of those persons who could converse "expertly" on any subject. Standing beside us on the upper deck of the Boston, enroute to New York Saturday night, he was pointing out the places of interest to his companion. As the ship approached the landmarks of the entrance to the cape Cod Canal, he pointed to the rocks covered with seaweed and said in an authoritative voice.

"Have you noticed how abundant the eagebrush is this year?"

Later on he enlightened his companion with an explanation of the purpose of bellboys that left the [illegible] of the ship when [illegible] was standing nearby, held with [illegible] Words of comment [illegible] explanation of the theory of cantilever bridges.

[illegible] spent most of our week-end on the sound, filled with enthusiasm for the trip. It was the first time we had gone to New York by boat and we found [illegible] had not one disadvantage—[illegible] and [illegible] plenty to operate the ship. . . . Richard Dix to Quit Radio Pictures

The split between Richard Dix and Radio Pictures has become definite. You will remember we said Rich and Radio were having a little difficulty coming to a financial agreement on a new contract. Here is the lowdown. Dix has been drawing a small salary plus a percentage on his pictures. None of the Dix pictures so far have been in the money, however, except "Cimarron," and Rich won't get his share of that for another six months. He feels, because of his personal hit in "Cimarron" he should either have a sizable increase in salary or a slight increase and a continuous percentage. Studio says same salary or nothing. So he'll quit Radio immediately after "Secret Service," leaving "Marcheta" and "The Frontier," both largely ballyhooed as Dix vehicles, to be made by others. Ricardo Cortez will probably fall heir to "Marcheta."

MIDDLE WEST IS FALLING FOR IT

Here in old New England the Battle of Clutch and Squawk Causes no excitement, inspires little talk. Out along Lake Erie and in the Buckeye State Ballyhoo Birds are chirping of a million-dollar gate!

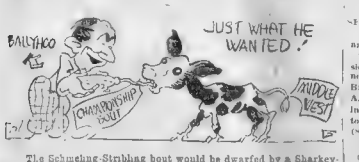
One week from next Friday in the great amphitheater on the shores of Lake Erie, aback Cleveland, Max Schmeling, from the land of the Wurtzburger and Pretzels, will meet Young Stribling, King of the Canebreaks, for boxing's highest award, the world's heavyweight championship. The world's heavyweight championship! What a thrill that generally sends along the spine of a boxing fan! Yet along this sector of the fistic terrain scarcely a ripple of excitement has been occasioned by the coming encounter for the Cauliflower championship of the universe. The big battle of the Clutch and Squawk is a "dud" as far as New England is concerned. Go back to past championship battles. Have you ever seen one received with such general apathy?

If the Schmeling-Stribling extravaganza is to be a financial success the Middle West, particularly the section within a couple hundred miles of Cleveland, will have to put it over. Other sections of the country are displaying the same apathy as New England towards it. New York and Chicago suddenly are bestirring themselves from their lethargy and the shrill cries of the ballyhoo bird are beginning to be heard along the Hudson and the shores of Lake Michigan. But in formen heavyweight championship encounters the ballyhoo bird would be screaming in full blast with the fight taking place right in his own backyard. Tonight he might not be bothering to emit a few raucous caws.

Talk about the South, Stribling's section, helping the gate is bunk. We doubt if $25,000 worth of tickets are sold in Dixie. Remember, $25,000 only is a drop in the bucket when a million dollar gate is concerned. That is what the promoters declare the gate will gross, $1,000,000. If it hits a million dollars the Middle West will have to donate all except a few thousand. They are not running special trains from all sections of the country like they did in the days when Tex Rickard was at the promotorial wheel and the great Dempsey ruled the heavyweight roost.

Not so long ago we were talking with a baseball writer who just had returned from a Mid-Western trip. We asked him if he thought the Schmeling Stribling gate would gross $600,000, and he replied: "Yes, unless something happens to gum the works the take will be close to $750,000. It will not run to a million as the promoters predict, but it will go bigger in Cleveland than it did Long Island."

"The middle West, in fact, as an encounter, is interesting the Middle West. This is a vacation season. The fight is being staged in July, time the eve of the Fourth. From all over the Middle West people will flock to Cleveland to see the great new stadium, the fight, the crowd and everything that goes with it. All kinds of excursions are being billed and advertised through out the Middle West. The Schmeling Stribling fight may be dead as far as the rest of the country is concerned, but from within [illegible] it will be a big event.



The Schmeling-Stribling bout would be dwarfed by a Sharkey-Schmeling or a Sharkey-Carnera encounter. Both of these bouts are bigger box office attractions than the Battle of the Clutch and Squawk. But in the present period of boxing depression and the general condition of boxing the Schmeling-Stribling bout in Cleveland may draw as big a gate as a Sharkey-Schmeling or a Sharkey Carnera bout would attract in the fistic centers of New York or Chicago. The promoters displayed excellent judgment in picking out Cleveland as the spot to dump it. Cleveland is the only middle spot on the fight map for it. The Middle West is hungry for an "event." The combination of new stadium, championship fight and the all-powerful ballyhoo gives Middle West just what it wants.

For the sake of other important fistic attractions to come, it is to be hoped that the battle of the Clutch and Squawk does not prove a bloomer. Jack Sharkey soon will meet Mickey Walker in a bout from which a large part of the proceeds will be donated to Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's worthy Milk Fund. Unless the Madison Square Garden Corporation blocks it, Sharkey and Carnera later in the season will meet in aid of another worthy charity. If Schmeling and Stribling put up a fast, sensational battle the two big charity shows will profit as much as they will be hurt should Max the Squawk and Willie the Clutch stage a necking party or a squawking debate.

Sweet Charity will not profit or boxing be helped much.
Should German and the Georgian fight a real old-fashioned "go"
The fans will flock in squadrons to the coming Milk Fund Show!

SEE TELEGRAM TO BUCKLEY HITS ACT

Chairman Eugene Buckley of the State Boxing Commission today asked the state police to investigate alleged telegrams sent to Leon See, manager of Primo Carnera, Italian heavyweight boxer, advising See not to bring Carnera to a series of exhibition bouts in Boston last night because injunction proceedings against Carnera had been started.

Buckley received this wire from See today:

"Unable to come to Boston today. I wish to state all facts why we could not come yesterday to box exhibition. Early yesterday I received the following Western Union wire

"'Do not come Monday night for Carnera exhibition at Braves Field. Court has issued injunction against your appearing. Have postponed this indefinitely, as there is too much court trouble on hand. My main bout is also cancelled. (signed)

A. A. Eddie Mack.'

SECOND TELEGRAM

"A few hours later I received another wire exactly as follows:

"'New York Boxing Commission has voted not to allow Carnera to box tomorrow night at Braves Field for the Argonne A A. I hereby notify you 24 hours in advance not to allow Carnera to appear at this exhibition. (signed) Massachusetts Boxing Commission, Eugene Buckley, Counsel, Boxer.'"

Continuing, See said:

"I hold both originals at your disposal, but you can surely have both traced at Western Union office with above indications. I wish you would give matter to police for thorough inquest against such criminal proceedings.

"As soon as Eddie Mack telephoned me at about 6:30 p. m. I tried everything humanly possible to get to Boston. I succeeded in locating Carnera. I phoned all aviation fields. There was no plane leaving at 7.15 for Boston. We missed it by 5 minutes.

TRIED TO FLY HERE

"I tried my utmost to charter a special plane. There was nothing available but a small one-motor three-seated one and the pilot could not agree to arrive in time. Also said Primo too heavy for one passenger. I would like commission to understand that we really did all we could, going as far as promising $100 for plane if there is time.

"When I received precise above wire signed by our Mr. Buckley and confirming the one signed by Eddie Mack you must admit I could not have had any suspicions of a criminal action. I would esteem it great favor if boxing commission would ask police to investigate with utmost energy. We have never disappointed a promoter and ask commission to realize there we are absolutely in good faith."

Both Mack and Buckley deny any connection with the telegrams.

Mack Charges Conspiracy Against Argonne A. A.

By JACK CONWAY

Captain Thomas Bligh of the state police acting under orders from the boxing commission today took a peeping shot at the Primo Carnera fable when he failed to appear for four two-round boxing exhibitions at an Argonne A. A. show at Braves Field.

Matchmaker Eddie Mack of the Argonne A. A. charges that his organization is the victim of a conspiracy. He says he talked with Leon See manager of Carnera over the long distance telephone to New York and that he was informed that See received three telegrams from Boston telling him the Argonne A. A. would not be permitted to box.

Mack and Commissioner Eugene Buckley emphatically denied they sent any telegrams to See.

Meanwhile 4000 boxing fans, some of whom went to Braves Field chiefly to see Carnera, took it on the chin.

State Police to Make Investigation

Asked for a statement as to what action the boxing commission planned to take, Commissioner Buckley made the following announcement:

"I have instructed Capt. Thomas Bligh of the State police to take charge of the investigation concerning Carnera's failure to appear at Braves Field.

"The commission will get See's story first hand, and also Capt. Bligh's report."

Matchmaker Eddie Mack, leading figure in the Argonne club, took the hot seat himself every time came to announce Carnera's absence to the crowd. He had himself introduced by his announcer and then addressed the fans as follows:

Mack Charges Conspiracy

"The Argonne A. A. and myself are victims of a conspiracy. Primo Carnera cannot be here to box an exhibition. (Prolonged

Stribling Gives Reason for Training at Night

Geauga Lake, O., June 23 (AP)—Bill Stribling, the only heavyweight title challenger whoever did all of his training for the big affair at night, has some interesting reasons to offer for his arrangement of [illegible]

Of course [illegible] when he fights Max Schmeling [illegible] Detroit one July 4 except [illegible] he thinks the heat [illegible]

He reasons rather [illegible] that to do this best one must be wide-awake. And so:

"If I trained every afternoon and went to bed at 9:00 or so at night for a couple of months, I'd develop the habit of doing off at that time every night and it wouldn't be healthy for me to be feeling like taking a nap about that time July 3, when I'll be about starting the first round with the German.

"So I figure that if I train nights under artificial light, under the same conditions that will prevail in the Cleveland municipal stadium, I'll just naturally be keen and eager when the first bell rings. It won't be my customary bedtime hour, I won't be likely to go to sleep on the folks unexpectedly."

The Georgia schlepper [illegible] fighting weight, at about 186 pounds, compared to the 195 he hopes for on the night of the battle.

Cleveland, June 23 (AP)—The Cleveland Boxing Commission will gather secretly with the managers of Young Stribling and Max Schmeling [illegible] Of the final five, two will be discarded by the commission and of the remaining three one will be drawn out of a hat July 3 to referee the 15-round heavyweight [illegible] The other two will act as judges.

It was announced today the Gene Fake of Los Angeles, a friend of Fidel La Barba, is the first choice for referee of both Stribling and Schmeling.

Get to the Bottom of It!

Twice within the last fortnight Boston fans have been disappointed by headliners in sporting events failing to put in appearance. A week ago Gino Garibaldi disappointed a wrestling gathering in the Boston Garden. Last night Primo Carnera, extensively billed and advertised, failed to show up at Braves Field.

The Massachusetts Boxing Commission should nip this growing evil in the bud. Who is to blame—contestant, manager, promoter? It is the duty of the Commission to get to the bottom of it.

STRATTON SETS RECORD AT CHARLES RIVER

DONNELLY IS RUNNER-UP IN TILT

Emory Stratton, Brae Burn,

Charles River Country Club this morning during the medal play tournament of the Boston four-ball league field today.

About 40 members of the Boston Four-ball League played this morning, but more than 100 are participating in the double event in afternoon in which they are playing a medal and four-ball tournament simultaneously.

Playing with Clark Hodder, Charlie Crane and Ed Childs, Stratton started at the ten tee and was out in 33, making one slip at the 12th. He had birdies at the 10th, 16th and 16th.

On his inward round Stratton was two under 4s for the first five holes, but three putts at the sixth cost him a 5, but he paved the remaining three holes in par figures.

Bill Donnelly Is Runner-Up

Bill Donnelly, ex-, former state junior champion, was the runner-up to Stratton with a 75. Donnelly went out in 37 and returned in 38.

Stratton at the first hole took a regulation 4, but came up with a birdie at the long second, where he was just short of the green, two and chipped on to be down with one putt.

After a fine drive from the third tee Stratton topped his second shot badly, but the ball ran up on the green, stopped eight feet from the cup and he dropped his putt for a birdie 3.

He went along to get par figures at the fourth and fifth holes, but his putback one of the strong kind that picked up for his birdie by three putting the sixth green for a 5.

Stratton played a beautiful third short at the 7th after hooking his drive. A 4—3 finish gave him a 39 for his out-water nine, but his virtue of birdies at the 10th and 12th, he was 3 under 4s for 14 holes and after a consultation at the long 15th he smeared his fourth birdie at the 16th.

His tee shot going to the 17th hit the top of the bank and dropped back into the trap and he wound up with a 4.

MODIOLA WINS RACELAND FEATURE

The first division race was won by Flag of Fashion, but only after one of the greatest battles ever seen on a local running track.

Neverfade, a chestnut colt, won the second half, Sea Mistress was second. Neverfade upheld his name, for he got away with remarkable speed and held his lead throughout.

The Blue and Red plate for three-year-olds and upwards was the second event of the day. The distance was a mile and one-sixteenth and the plate was presented by Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, Jr. Dawdle a chestnut filly owned by Regan McKinley won the event. Dawdle had a commanding lead. Gwynlyn was second and Red Rocket 3rd, third.

The third race, the steeplechase of 2½ miles for the master's plate which was presented by Henry G. Vaughan master of foxhounds, and the prize given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Channing, was over a distance of 2 ½ miles.

Maibo owned by Augustus F. Goodwyn of the Eastern Horse Club, won the race in as brilliant an event as any ever staged at that distance.

The Raceland Cup Steeplechase, for four-year-olds and upwards, for a purse of $2,000, over the two-mile route, was won by Modiola.

One of the biggest upsets of the afternoon took place in the 2½-mile steeplechase for the Flying Horse Farm plate. Young Prince, owned by Bayard Warren, with Regan McKinney up, won the event. Bolton was picked to win, and undoubtedly would have done so had his rider, R. Hamilton, remained astride him.

CARNERA FAILS TO APPEAR

"Carnera is under contract to appear here. Contract is on file with the boxing commission. Some unnamed party sent Carnera three wires saying New York and Boston Garden would not permit him to appear. One telegram was signed 'Eugene Buckley.' My name was on another and the name of a Boston newspaperman on the third telegram.

"I called Leon See, Carnera's manager, at the Plaza Hotel in New York. I tried to charter an airplane at Newark to rush Carnera here and arranged for a motorcycle escort to bring Primo from East Boston to the ball park.

"The boxing commission has taken up the question of the three wires. Carnera will be suspended if the commission is not satisfied. If there is anybody who is not satisfied with the show, leave your names at the box office and I shall send you back your money (applause)."

Sam Langford and Joe Walcott, a couple of old-timers, were then introduced. They received a good hand. The crowd forgot about Carnera as it watched Langford and Walcott illustrate their winning punches and then box an exhibition.

Renault Defeats Darcy White

Jack Renault of Cambridge then outpointed Darcy White of New Bedford in a fast 10-round bout. White was rated as a combination of George Dixon and Tiger Flowers. He is a strong willing boy, but he does not look like one tenth of the famous fighters he is supposed to be like.

Following the show nobody asked for their money back. Perhaps if Mr. [illegible] offered to refund the [illegible] would have [illegible] [illegible] plane of Carnera [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Diamond Dust

The Red Sox move into Cleveland today for a four-game series with the Indians. There will be a double-header this afternoon and single games tomorrow and Thursday. Jack Russell and Milt Gaston are down to twirl for the Sox, while Harder and Hudlin are listed to go to the hill for the Peckmen in the twin bill.

The Fenway flock captured three in a row on its last visit to the Forest City. If it could make another clean sweep this time, it would go into a tie with the Indians for fourth place.

The Collinsmen go into Cleveland with an even split in a four-game series with the Tigers to their credit as a result of Danny Macfayden's 7-to-3 victory in the final contest in Detroit.

It was the first tilt of the engagement in which the victor tinkled in front by more than one run, the Tigers winning the first two, 7 to 6 and 5 to 4, respectively, and the Sox taking the third, 7 to 5.

"Red" Worthington, the Tribe's leading hitter, is recovering rapidly from the "charley horse," which forced him out of the lineup during the first game of Sunday's double-header with the Cards, and there is a chance that he will be able to return to action against the Reds this p. m.

NEW PACKARD CARS

New in design · New in performance · New in luxury

The new Continental models of the Packard Eight are now on display at our showrooms. You are cordially invited to examine them.

Old only in distinguished name, in adherence to the simplest principles of motor design, and in refusal to give up the characteristic beauty of line that has long spelled "Packard", the new Packards are new in everything else. Longer in wheelbase, wider in tread and with new frames! Such foundation changes make newness a necessity throughout.

Bodies have been redesigned for greater beauty, strength and luxury. They are now most thoroughly insulated against heat, cold and noise. Freshly upholstered and trimmed, with new pillow-top cushions, their interior loveliness will appeal to all.

The new Vee radiator provides an identifying mark of smartness. The new bonnet houses a more powerful motor, floated in rubber, and one that only purrs in its quietness. Out of the richest experience in the industry, Packard continues to present the simplicity and economy of eight-in-line design and in doing this challenges any other type on any score.

Outstanding among the many new features is Ride Control—shock absorbers adjustable from the dash to meet any road, speed, load or temperature condition. Now, instantly, you can have just the kind of ride you like best. Ride Control, the newest and most appreciated thing in motoring, is to be had only in Packard cars.

You will appreciate the four-speed synchro-mesh transmission as Packard builds it. You will marvel at the action of the Stabilizers built into the bumpers of the larger cars. You will enjoy, and we mean this most literally, the exploration of the new Packard for its many new features.

Again, come and see the new cars. Ride in them and drive them yourself and then compare them with all other cars. In spending your motoring dollar when dollars mean more, why not have the car of tomorrow instead of any car of yesterday?

Monday evening, June 29th, Packard presents GERALDINE FARRAR, famous Metropolitan soprano, in her first radio recital, in honor of its new cars.

The Packard Eight is offered in thirteen beautiful body styles—the Packard Eight DeLuxe in twelve. Prices at the factory range from $2485 to $4550.

RACE MEETING APPROVED

The Salem, N. H., horse racing meet, which will get under way at the old Rockingham track July 1 will occupy the same relationship to the Jockey Club, which controls racing in New York, as other tracks outside of New York, the New Hampshire Breeders' Association announced today.

Announcement was made in New York yesterday that the Jockey Club had withdrawn its jurisdiction from the State of New Hampshire. The New Hampshire Association today named Maj. Algernon Daingerfield, secretary of the Jockey Club, as establishing from the Jockey Club office in New York, that the meet at Rockingham would be in the same position as far as the club is concerned as Chicago, Maryland, Kentucky, New Orleans and others outside of New York.

"To extend its jurisdiction to Salem, the Jockey Club would have been compelled to send a steward and a representative to collect its usual share of one per cent of every purse and forfeit fees and supervise such other matters as come under its head in New York," the association quoted Major Daingerfield as saying.

"The Jockey Club is not sending officials to Salem for the reason that it wants to save the expense and other troubles that might be involved by having its representative at the track."

A 35-day meet has been scheduled for the Rockingham track and several stables have already brought horses to the track.

'ackie Berg Wins Over Tony Lambert

Newark, N. J., June 23 — Jack (Kid) Berg, British lightweight, won over Tony Lambert of Newark in the eighth round of a 10-round bout here last night. The referee stopped in to halt the bout when the Newark lad no longer could defend himself.

A FUTURE CHAMP?

Thirteen - year - old MARY BOYDEN of Winchester, seeded first in the tennis tournaments at Longwood for girls under 15 and winner of last year's title. Mrs. Wightman says that little Mary some day is destined to sit on a tennis throne as queen of the women players. It looks as if premier laurels in the tournament would narrow down to a battle between Mary Boyden and Louise Williams, another Winchester miss.

YOUNGSTERS IN TITLE PLAY

Play in the annual girls' and boys' Massachusetts State tennis championship tournament started yesterday at the Longwood Cricket Club in Chestnut Hill, with the younger class girls' singles in the morning, and the older class boys' singles in the afternoon.

A Melrose boy, Paul Guibord, scored the only upset of the first day of play when he defeated Howard Roorbach, seeded No. 7 in the older class boys' singles.

Play in the boys' division reached the third round, and the top seeded player and defending champion, Maynard Weisberg of English high school easily made his way into the fourth round, defeating Charles Swanson in two sets.

BROADCAST WAR ON GANGS

System Declared More Menacing Than Men by Hub Author

Among the most powerful forces waging war on gangdom, there happens to be one man employing radio. Incidentally he is a Boston man—Charles Francis Coe. Broadcasting is the latest big gun used in his crusade, which he points out is not so much for the purpose of persecuting individual racketeers as it is to prosecute the system by which underworld overlords operate.

Believe it or not, Mr. Coe knows a great many mob leaders well. More than a hundred of them. Actual "big shots," according to the modern term, shake hands with him in speakeasies at night, while he lambasts them in print and on the air the following day. How does he avoid being put "on the spot"? That's easy; at least he thinks so. He never violates a confidence. Furthermore, he claims that he would not lift a finger against a gangster individually, although he would break his neck to destroy the system by which they profit.

There have been threats on his life, to be sure. Yet Charles Francis Coe is six feet high, square-jawed and fearless. He walks down dark alleys, secures amazing facts, then takes his microphone turn for NBC in the "Gangland" series that steadily becomes more popular each week. Once the proprietor of an auto mobile business in Boston, here is a man who has found out things that would make him the world's premier stool pigeon were he to reveal names. But he doesn't carry on his work with any such idea.

Gangdom "on the Spot" . . . .

Mr. Coe seeks to establish constructive ways and means by which to smash what he claims to be the real menace—the system. Getting the gangster by means of income tax reports is sure-fire, he states. His suggestion of this procedure has brought about definite action along that line. To use his own words Charles Francis Coe is determined to "dissipate the glamour that surrounds a gangster in the public mind."

A rumor that almost warrants a prediction is to the effect that Charlie O'Connor is regarded as the most likely successor to Joe Lopez on the Catholic Truth Period through WNAC (Sundays at 1 p. m.). Linus Travers has been sort of filling in since the departure of Lopez for Bridgeport, Ct.

It's Just Too Bad!

Lovers of symphony music will regret the announcement concerning another program going under cover for the summer (the reason given). Melody by the Dewy Symphony Orchestra fades out of the studios June 28. Admirers of Edgar Guest will miss the feature also.

When people at large are not particularly pleased, they take that old slogan, "Write to Your Congressman," rather seriously. If continued abuse of radio advertising privileges continue more than likely federal intervention, or radio magnates themselves, will create some sort of high tribunal. After all, movies have Will Hays, baseball has Judge Landis, so what is to prevent radio from having somebody, whether it wants him or not.

Folks have been telling Morton (CBS) Downey about this Boston chap named Adrian O'Brien, recently signed by NBC. As Tony Wons says, Morton is listening.

NEW LIFE-SAVER FOR SUB TESTED

New York, June 23 (AP)—Officials of the Bishop Tool Co. today revealed that a special submarine life-saving device had been tested.

It is a rescue chamber to bring crews out of sunken submarines without exposing them to great variations of pressure.

The chamber of pear-shaped eight feet in diameter at the top and five at the bottom. There are two compartments, an upper and lower, the lower being open to the sea. In rescue work a diver may descend to the lower chamber and fasten a wire rope to the submarine's two escape hatches.

The chamber wedges itself to the hatch, which is then opened. This allows six to ten men to enter the lower chamber and later the upper chamber.

Buoyancy is maintained by emptying cans of water. As more men enter the chamber, more water is emptied.

One Killed, 4 Hurt in Mine Strike Battle

Arnold City, Pa., June 23 (AP)—One man was killed and four injured here today in a clash between deputy sheriffs and striking miners and sympathizers.

The man killed was a bystander, Philo Popovich, 40, who had run out of his store when he heard shooting. Pickets had gathered near the Arnold City mine where officers were on guard. An egg thrown by a boy struck a deputy sheriff and the shooting followed.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Builder head of the steam trawler Boston, owned by the Massachusetts Trawling Co., broke under the strain of towing her dragnet on George Bank, 120 miles eastward of Highland Light, Cape Cod, and struck the bottom of the ocean. Drifting for several hours, the Boston's crew sighted the fish dragger Babe Sears bound for Boston. A towing line was passed to the crippled craft and both proceeded here, arriving safely at the Fish Pier.

American Tax-Payers Should Not Be Asked to Pay Any Further the Price of European War Frenzy, Says Mr. Hearst

(The following article was written in reply to questions submitted to Mr. Hearst last week by a representative of the London Daily Express on general topics, including America's stand on war debts revision, American high tariffs, American gold hoarding, and the effect of the present crisis on the capitalistic system.

The answers to the questions were not what the Daily Express desired, and, consequently, they were not printed.

In fact, nothing is printed in European countries these days which might possibly interfere with the marvelous opportunity now offered Europe, through debt reduction, to dip into the American pocketbook.)

THE great war was a European war—precipitated and conducted by European nations for European purposes of aggression and aggrandizement.

America, for no sufficient reason, entered into this European war, violating the injunction of our great President, George Washington, to keep free from foreign entanglements.

America paid her own way in this European war. America, through cancellation of debts due her by foreign nations incurred for their expenses in the war, paid a great part of the cost of the war to these foreign nations, although, I repeat, the war was not our war but their war and their customary kind of war, inspired by envy and hatred, and waged for purposes of greed and aggression.

European nations and their bankers now come forward with a proposal for further "revision of war debts"—which means nothing more nor less than that Americans shall be asked to pay still more of the cost of a war which was not their war, and that foreign nations which precipitated the war shall be still further relieved of the costs and consequences of their evil and unholy war habit.

I SAY that American taxpayers have enough taxes to pay on obligations they have already incurred, and that they should not be asked to pay any further the price of European war frenzy, and that any American politician who asks them to pay for past European wars or supply funds for future European wars should be impeached by the Congress of the United States and tried for treason to his people and his country.

This plan for revision of war debts, with America paying the piper while war-mad Europe dances, is purely a plan of international bankers, who make money through commissions out of spoliation of their countrymen. One of these bankers wrote me the whole plan months before it was made public and asked my support of it.

I refused support, and I pledged unending opposition to this plan to plunder the American people in the interests of foreign nations, for which most of these international bankers are financial agents.

The international bankers and unpatriotic politicians, who openly propose this plan to despoil America to secure for themselves a share in the spoils, are sure to learn in a way that they will never forget that Americans are not the dupes they are supposed to be. American citizens, although they would gladly see England pay less and France pay more, will refuse to have any additional burdens piled upon themselves, and will see to it that the unscrupulous politicians who propose such an injustice are properly penalized for their unpatriotic plans.

I, FOR one, declare here and now for Calvin Coolidge for the next President of the United States.

I, for one, subscribe wholly and heartily to the patriotic declaration of Mr. Coolidge, who denounced this scheme for the outrageous piece of robbery and snobbery that it is.

The American people want a vigorous American in the White House, and they are going to have one—either a Coolidge or a Roosevelt.

Not all the subsidies of foreign nations, lavishly spent in American politics by international bankers, are going to prevent American voters from electing the next time an American President who will stand staunchly for the interests of his own country and the welfare of his own people first, last and all the time.

AMERICA has a high protective tariff because she wants it and thinks it is to her advantage. England has free trade because she wants it and thinks it is to her advantage. Neither country is so altruistic as to regulate her tariff policy for the benefit of other countries. Personally, I believe in a tariff, but with reciprocity agreements with other countries for mutual advantage.

Let us not be hypocrites and assume that any countries are actuated by any motive except individual or mutual advantage.

Personally, I believe that the British Empire should have free trade between its component parts, but an Imperial tariff to protect the Empire against foreign competition. The English, as well as Americans, have a high standard of living to defend. The Imperial tariff, like the United States tariff, could and should be modified by reciprocity agreements with other nations for mutual advantage. But if the British Empire has no tariff, it cannot take advantage of reciprocity agreements and secure foreign markets. England would be better employed in improving her own industrial and trade conditions instead of complaining because America is trying to improve hers.

America is not hoarding gold to any large extent—not to the extent that France is. So, if hoarding gold is to be advanced as a reason for cancelling debts, why does not France cancel the German debt? But oh, no! France does not cancel any debts and DOES NOT PAY ANY.

She piles up gold and has more gold per capita than any nation in the world because she keeps everything that comes in and allows nothing to go out—not even her honest debts to the nation which kept her from becoming a subordinate province of the German Empire.

If the international bankers want to get upset over anything, let them get upset over the behavior of France.

France is the most disturbing element in the world today. France is the war menace of the world.

France is defaulting on her debts and using the money so misappropriated for building up a gigantic war machine for the subjugation of Europe.

One of our most able and most patriotic and most beloved statesmen—a man who may be President and who would make a good one—said to me the day before I left America:

"You will find that the great trouble with Europe is that FRANCE IS STILL MAKING WAR ON GERMANY. The Versailles Treaty was not a peace treaty as far as France is concerned. It was merely the betrayal of her enemy into her hands."

There will be no peace in Europe until France is compelled to cease creating wars.

LET the international bankers, I say, become upset over this menace to the peace of the world and the prosperity of the world. Here is a nation preparing every day to plunge the world again into war, to destroy more of the wealth of the world, to create further and more aggravated conditions of exhaustion and depression, to devastate Europe as it was devastated after the Hundred Years War, and to interfere with the prosperity of EVERY nation, for nations are mutually dependent in their prosperity one upon another.

Here is a nation which should be haled before the high court of assembled nations of the world and bound over to keep the peace or suffer the violent consequences to those "that live by the sword."

Here is a bullying nation, a swaggering nation, a swashbuckling nation, which has grown rich through plunder and repudiation, and is brazenly preparing to increase its hoard to the injury of all the rest of the world through further practices of the same piratical character.

Let the international bankers be upset over THAT.

"WILL present conditions end the capitalistic system?"

No. But another World War would universally and overwhelmingly end it, and would Russianize Europe and America, too, unless America had intelligence enough this time to keep out of the war.

I do not know of anything else that would end the capitalistic system except, perhaps, the senseless folly of the capitalists themselves in trying to impose additional burdens upon people in times of depression and deprivation.

Certainly the failure of Bolshevism in Russia is not much of a menace to capitalism. And Bolshevism is a failure—almost as much of a failure as the despotism which preceded it and almost as much of a tyranny.

THERE is no success in a government which does not secure liberty. The object of government, as Thomas Jefferson phrased it, is "the greatest good of the greatest number," and the greatest good is liberty. After that comes opportunity and then prosperity.

Russia has none of these; neither liberty, nor opportunity, nor prosperity. Bolshevism is a complete and a completely obvious failure.

The recent ridiculous trial of alleged conspirators in Russia was merely a perfectly plain attempt to excuse the deficiencies of Bolshevism to its own supporters, and to lay the blame for its failures upon foreign conspiracies which all except the ignorant Russian peasantry knew perfectly well did not exist.

Bolshevism is not now a danger to the world. It is merely an inconvenience and annoyance. A man becomes an inconvenience by expiring on your doorstep, but he is not a danger.

Bolshevism is not a peril as it exists today. But beware of another war.

Bolshevism is bred in the blood of battlefields. Cannon fodder fertilizes the seed of anarchy. Let capitalism take care not to excite nor permit another war, and not to lay further burdens upon the bent backs of an impatient people. The commissions the capitalists might secure will not pay for the disaster which will then surely overtake them.

Listen, World!

Death Is No Greater Mystery Than Life

YOU SAY he's dead.
You say so surely
"He will live no more"—
How can you know?

How can you be so sure
About the thing called Death,
When you know nothing
Of the thing called Life?
Death is no greater Mystery than Life—
Veils shroud
the living
As they shroud
the dead.

Elsie Robinson

A little while ago
Yousaid—
"He lives."
You held his hand,
You knew his face and form,
But never once did you
Behold his Self.
His body was a shell,
As much a shell while living
As when dead.
The Self you loved
But hid within that form
And spoke to you
Through binding walls of flesh.

And yet you said, "He lives,"
Although you never Saw the man himself,
Nor knew from whence he came,
Nor how he lived and thought,
Nor of what secret essence
He was made.
All this was veiled in darkness—
Still—you felt he lived.
And walked, without a question.
By his side.

And though between you
There were silences,
And constant strangeness—
Deep as any grave—
You still had faith
That he was always there,
Though hidden from you
By blank walls of flesh.
THEN HAVE FAITH NOW!
If spirits can surmount
The walls of flesh,
Why should they perish
In the halls of death?
A man may leave a house
And walk, once more,
Along a trail—
And yet we do not say,
"The man is dead."

Then do not cry—
"My loved one lives no more."
Say rather—"He has gone
"Along the trail
"To wider ventures
"And a freer air."
And put aside
Your bitterness—your tears.
You dared to love,
Dare now to pay the price,
And pay it proudly.
Look down on his face
And say—"I'm glad
"We found each other
"In life's mystery—
"Glad that we knew
"The miracle of love—
"Then go, my darling,
"Go, as I shall go,
"With head held high
"On grateful memory
"And heart set on
"The greater chances
"Yet to come.
"God bless you, dear—
"Go free
"I'll carry on."

Taxicab Service Improving in the Big City

NEW YORK, June 23—During the past two years New York's taxi service has made a decided spurt for the better. Before that most taxis were comparable to those kitten-powered, ram-shackle chariots flooding the boulevards of Paris.

Such cities as St. Louis, Cincinnati, Los Angeles and Chicago far excelled in taxi comfort. The New York taxi was often chauffeured by beetle-browed, insulting ruffians who looked upon every passenger as fair game. There was a definite link between them and the underworld.

Late wayfarers around the large terminals were often taken to isolated spots and beaten and robbed. The police seemed to look upon their depredations with an astonishing indifference. The bespatted Grover Whalen was the first Commissioner to recognize the taxis' alliance with crime.

He instituted reforms that have been continued to the present state of improvement. After midnight visitors should still select a cab carefully, choosing a Yellow, Terminal or Checker over which is a supervision. This precaution often averts dire consequence.

The most dangerous cabs are those parked around night club doors in the early morning hours. They are often manned by ex-criminals who specialize in "rolling drunks." The wise New Yorker walks a few blocks away from such haunts to select his cab.

There are some 30,000 taxis in New York and at the moment about 21,000 are in first class condition.

A New Yorker is rarely conscious of faces along the street. They are a blur. It is largely responsible for the apparent cold-heartedness of the town. The most curious yokel will after a time acquire this mask of impersonality. There is no ex-counting for it. Just New York.

There is fun in a prowl about a bath shop in the Grand Central region with its bottles, soaps, towelings, scales and salts to match in pastel shades. A gadget to hold your novel and turn pages while you read. A crystal shaving stand flung up like a cenotaph, fitted with magnifying mirrors and receptacles for razors and myriad shaving accessories, flesh brushes and massage creations.

* * *

It strikes me that a bathroom should be the most comfortable spot in a home. Everything should be on hand to make the shave a leisurely morning rite. The most constructive thoughts for a business day are formed at such a time. Somehow a man is shorn of smug self conceptions and can look at things as they are with a satisfying detachment.

* * *

As a matter of fact the nucleus for my present job was evolved from a fugitive thought while scraping my face with a razor in an uptown hotel years ago. I was still dizzy following a swift bounce from a newspaper and my melancholy reflection ran like this: "After years of working hard, here I am broke and without a job. There must be a way to make a living without work." And so I became a columnist.

Also I find a humorous nip in the window of a Lexington avenue dog shop. A mongrel puppy, with lop ears, awkward legs and amazingly long tail looks out wistfully upon passing crowds. A window card reads: "Buy me and I'll do my best to outlive the scandal in my family."

* * *

No one has the flair of Irvin Cobb for salvaging quaint philosophy and high comedy out of window shopping. Catch him in an irrelevant mood on such a pilgrimage and you'll be sliding up side streets doubling with laughter. He is at his very best before a display of fashionable riding togs.

Just Folks

In the Car

What is there in a motorcar
Among the levers and the wheels
That makes us different than we are
At meals?

Why should the driver's seat inspire
So much of anger and of hate?
Elsewhere for men I don't admire
I wait.

What is there in the horn I blow
Or pedals foot must press upon
That seems to make a mortal foe
Of everyone?

Elsewhere to be polite I strive,
My manners always courteous are;
Why must I then so rudely drive
The car?

Why do such bitter things I speak
At men who show more haste than I Merely because I know they seek To hurry by?

Why all the anger and the rage
Which every time I drive I show?
Is it the madness of the age?
P'raps so.

Gas Company Charges

Charlestown and Somerville Protest

The people of Charlestown and Somerville complain that by some process of financial and political legerdermain the gas company is mulcting them of money and shearing them of their rights as customers and citizens.

They woke up one fine morning to discover that the familiar old gas company, which for generations had served them with reasonable satisfaction, had been absorbed by the Boston Consolidated Gas Company.

When they received their bills at the end of the first month, they learned to their amazement that they had been assessed a "meter charge" of fifty cents per month, a device to which the old and respected company had never resorted.

They learned that they were to be denied the discount allowance which the old company had granted them for prompt payment of their bills.

The State never had authorized the old company to assess this meter charge. The Boston Consolidated had arbitrarily extended upon the people of Charlestown and Somerville a practice which they had been granted authority to impose upon the people of Boston.

We are encouraged to believe that when two corporations consolidate, they "retain the best elements of both."

High rates and indirect charges are "best elements" which the people of Charlestown and Somerville are willing to forego.

They have performed their duty by lodging their protests with the State Department of Public Utilities. Now it remains for the Department to do its duty.
